YEARBOOK '97-'98

Wow! When I took on the job of staff advisor, I really didn't understand what was involved in the evolution of a yearbook. Theme development, the basics of layout and design, organizing the pages, and on and on, until finally there is a whole book ready to go for publication.

We had a great group in Yearbook this year, and we had a lot of fun.

Angela, with her natural eye for layout and design
James, the all-rounder, taking on any assignment thrown his way
Will and his after lunch sleepiness and sneaking out with Nicky
Lauren and Naomi, who kept us laughing or at least kept laughing
Sean and Al, the computer guys (Sean did the cartoons, too!)
Pat, who joined us late but got right in there Alana, who kept picking up speed all year and last but not least, 'Lulu' and his warped sense of humour.

I would like to thank Monique for taking on some of the rowing layouts and for doing such a beautiful job. I also want to thank James, Alana and Will for coming in during and after exams to finish additional layouts. Finally, I am especially grateful to Luwam, who gave up several days of his summer vacation to stay behind and help me finish - I couldn't have done it without you!

On behalf of the Yearbook Club, we hope that you enjoy the book, and that it is a fair representation of your year.

JOHN ATTERBURY - John grew up in Victoria and attended the University of Victoria, receiving his Bachelor of Education. Having played five years of Varsity soccer with the UVic Vikes and coached soccer at various age levels, he helped coach the Brentwood soccer team this year. He still manages to play soccer in his free time as well as hike, camp and travel.

AMANDA CALLIN - Though originally from Calgary, Amanda has lived in Victoria for the past nine years. She received her Bachelor of Arts in French Language and Literature and Teacher's Certification from the University of Victoria. Before coming to work at Brentwood, she travelled throughout Mexico and Europe and lived in Paris. This past year she taught French and supervised the yearbook. In her free time, Amanda likes to read, garden and dance.

CAM ELFORD - Cam, also from Victoria, went to Uvic where he earned a Bachelor's Degree in Political Science and English. While working on his Master's Degree in English, Cam coached swimming and worked as a lifeguard. This past year he taught English and coached rugby and triathlon. When he is not working, Cam stays active by training for the Ironman competition.

Before arriving at Brentwood she taught art to secondary school students, while also producing her own ceramic artwork. She has shown her work locally and it has also been collected in Australia, Japan, England and Switzerland. Peggy's other interests include cooking, gardening and supporting the arts in her community.

OLAVE KRIGOLSON - Originally from Auckland, New Zealand, Olave attended the University of Victoria, receiving his Bachelor of Education degree (with Honours) in Physics and Physical Education. Before coming to work at Brentwood, He played professional basketball in New Zealand for the "Caltex Stars". This past year, when he was not teaching Physics and Computer Resources or coaching the Jr. Girls volleyball or Jr. Boys basketball teams, Olave could be found mountain biking, hiking or snowboarding.

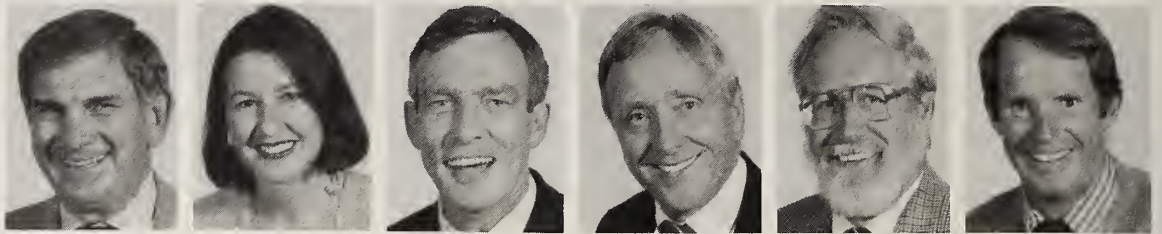

INGRID PERCY - Ingrid attended the Emily Carr Institute of Art and Design, earning her Diploma in Fine Arts and Bachelor of Fine Arts degree. She also received her Master of Fine Arts degree from UVic. This past year she taught Art 2D at Brentwood, as well as working as a sessional lecturer at UVic. FRANK PURDON - After twelve years as the Housemaster of Rogers House, teaching oceanography, science and French, and coaching various activities such as mountain biking, which he introduced to the school, Frank is leaving Brentwood to pursue other interests. He plans to finish his Master's degree and then to do some travelling, perhaps to Costa Rica where he can catch up on his surfing. We will all miss him tremendously, and wish him the very best in his coming adventures.

T. GIL BUNCH: A COLLEAGUE REMEMBERED

A biography of T. G. Bunch is truly a history of Brentwood College. He is a Brentwood icon. Through the reigns of two headmasters, from the earliest days of the school almost to the present, every image of Brentwood contained Gil in it. He not only represented Brentwood in its entirety; what it stood for, what it believed in, he also gave clear and sharp definition to many of its parts – truly a man for all men, all occasions, and all seasons. He dominated the Brentwood stage for thirty years, playing many different roles – colleague, teacher, director, counselor, coach, -- in his own firm, flamboyant, but ultimately, always caring and forgiving, manner.

Gil never made the mistake of believing that the best way of getting the support of young people was to try and be like them. Just the reverse, in fact. Through the power of his personality he persuaded them it was important to be like him. I remember at a charity milk run several years ago, Gil striding along in a suit with his raincoat around his shoulders surrounded by a group of acolytes similarly dressed, engaged in an earnest discussion on John Donne, whilst we lesser mortals ran silently by in our runners and sweats. How we yearned to be a part of that special group, and we all waited at the end to clap them over the line. Here was true respect and admiration. In this way Gil was always larger than life, a heroic figure, sometimes severe, often witty, occasionally outrageous, but always impossible to ignore.

This ability to dominate students with his mere presence could be seen at each and every assembly he conducted. Every move was carefully choreographed as, coffee cup and cigarette at the ready, he looked out over the assembled mass of hushed students and intoned “eyes, eyes”, whereupon every pair in the school focused on him. Not a sound was heard. Teachers and students alike hardly dared to breathe. Legend even has it that once, having described some heinous crime, he ordered the unknown culprit to leave the assembly and go to his study, whereupon no less than six would be criminals (including a member of the staff) got up and crept out! Such was his power to influence and persuade. This supposed happening has been retold as many times as Peter MacFarland’s famous story that Gil once ordered the students in the dining room to eat without chewing since there was too much noise! No wonder Gil is today a figure of mythical proportions and one we are not likely to see again.

Gil was truly my mentor. He was the revered and inspirational colleague who was everybody’s all-time favorite teacher. Everyone, staff and students alike, copied him. If imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, then generations of Brentonians admired him and continue to keep the memory of this unique and much-loved man alive. What T.G.B. stood for will be as relevant in 2080 as it was in 1980. What he taught us all will never go out of style because his values and beliefs are timeless. The power of his intellect, the passion of his convictions, the outrageousness of his public persona, the gentleness of his patience, and the energy and dedication with which he pursued his manifold interests and enthusiasms, touched all who came in contact with him. It does not matter whether this contact was brief or extensive, on all, Gil left a permanent and indelible impression. For over thirty years, more than any other individual he shaped Brentwood’s identity and with it, my own. I am proud that I could call him an esteemed colleague and a precious friend, and the outpouring of concern that so overwhelmed him during his final illness shows that literally hundreds of Old Brentonians felt as I did. I do not know whether it is really possible in just a few minutes to do justice to a figure who was larger than life, who strode the Brentwood campus like a colossus, and whose impact on all of us has been immeasurable. He was truly a legend in his own lifetime. Through the power of his presence, he taught us how to reach out and find our higher selves. His expectations were enormous and we willingly sought to exceed them. He brought out the best in all of us because we did not want to disappoint him. We had our lives broadened, made more meaningful and exciting, and ultimately changed forever by what Gil showed us. With his help, we were able to reach out and find that piece of perfection that is within all of us. To him, I, and I know all of you, will be eternally grateful. It was indeed an honor to know him and we will surely never forget him. To salute his memory, the best thing we can do is keep his ideas alive and pass them on to the future generations of Brentonians who, sadly, will not enjoy the privilege of having known him personally.

IN MEMORIAM: MRS. DOT PITT

I first met Mrs. Pitt 13 years ago when I arrived at Brentwood as a young math teacher fresh out of university, assigned to the position of assistant housemistress in Mackenzie. I would like to share with you a little story about something that happened on one of our first of many duties together.

During the orientation that first week, Mrs. Pitt rescued me from a rather awkward situation. One bold grade 12 boy strolled up to me, put his arm around my shoulder and said, "Hello there, what grade are you in?" I just stood there, frozen and temporarily speechless. Sensing my distress, Mrs. Pitt marched right over and said, in a kind but firm voice, "Young man, kindly take your hands off this young lady, she is a teacher here at this school; besides, you are breaking the 6 inch rule!"

From that day on, I knew that I had found a friend and a kindred spirit in Mrs. Pitt.

At that point in time, having "semi-retired", Mrs. Pitt was still very active in the girls' houses. She arrived faithfully on Friday nights to cover prep and the dreaded "house clean-up". As well, she appeared every Sunday morning, usually an hour or so early, to take over the supervision of Mackenzie and Alex houses so that the house staff could have a much-needed break from the emotional turmoil of running a girls' dorm. It was on these Sundays that the traditional "tea with Mrs. Pitt" was born.

Dot arrived for every duty with such enthusiasm and cheerfulness. I think we all know how much she treasured and enjoyed those opportunities to work with the young ladies of Brentwood. I can only hope she knows how much we valued her service and how much we treasured her presence.

As with her swimming program, Mrs. Pitt set high standards in the way she performed her duties. We can credit Dot for establishing many of the rules and procedures that have helped Mackenzie and Alex run smoothly and, more importantly, feel like a home away from home.

Affectionately known as "Auntie Dot", "Dot the Spot", "Granny Pitt", "Little treasure", and "Mom", she filled many roles and was such a big part of the Brentwood family.

As I was digging through my closet trying to decide what to wear today, I found this dress. It's a bit tight, and perhaps a little outdated, but I wanted to wear it – it was Dot's favorite. It reminds me of her because I will always remember how wonderful she made me feel when I wore it. "You always look so bonny in that dress" she would say. Dot always knew just the right thing to say. She has comforted, given advice, and spoken words of encouragement to so many people over the years.

Well, I have to say that Dot wasn't just "bonny"; she was beautiful on the outside and the inside. She had the glow of a woman deeply in love with a wonderful man and in love with life.

Thinking of her, I am sure we can all say that we have learned many things from Dot. In her own quiet way she has taught us about standards, responsibility, integrity, commitment, dignity, style, grace, courage, selflessness, kindness and most importantly, love.

We are grateful for all the gifts that she has given to us.

Right up until the day of her operation, Dot was full of hope, ideas and plans for the future. Perhaps we can take comfort in knowing that she was still looking forward and not looking back. In fact, she told Mr. Ross that she was planning to return to her duties in the fall and made him promise to save her a place.

Dot – there will always be a place for you – In our hearts.

- Jane Jackson

GRAD COUNCIL

GRADUATE ADDRESS

SATURDAY, JUNE 20, 1998

Like many of us today, I am fascinated by the approaching millennium. However, as an historian, my interest revolves more around looking back at the twentieth century rather than forwards into the twenty-first. In particular, my interest was aroused recently by a statement in a book I was reading on Britain in the inter-war years, which stated that three people who, in their own way, have made a significant difference to the age in which they lived, were all in the same graduating class of a small, independent school in eastern England. The school was Gresham's School, Holt, and the three students were Benjamin Britten, the composer who took classical music along a new path, W.H. Auden, the poet, whose lyric skills and revolutionary zeal inspired a generation, and Donald MacLean, the diplomat and Marxist idealist, whose treasonous actions, altered the balance of power in the early years of the Cold War. What, I wondered, was there about this minor public school, situated in a small, remote country town in Norfolk that it spawned three such interesting and unusual students, each of whom was later to have such an impact upon their generation. Was it the influence of their teachers or perhaps their fellow students, or maybe even the chemistry of the school itself? Probably, we will never know, but for me, as I step down from my role as of adviser, guide and mentor to Brentwood's graduating class after more than two decades, it sparked a few thoughts about the relationship that exists between a graduating class and the school as a whole and the possible effect each has on the other.

Today's ceremony is the final act in the passing of the flame to next year's carriers of the torch. De manu in manum, from hand to hand, the School motto is never more appropriate than today. As the Class of '98 say their farewells, they will leave behind as their legacy to those who come after them, the Brentwood traditions and philosophy that they have upheld and promoted. At the same time, the Class of '98 will also, we hope, take from the School a set of well-learned values with them into the larger, more uncertain world that they are about to enter.

It is this nostalgic, looking-back at their collective Brentwood experience, whilst at the same time looking forward to the new, exciting challenges to come, that produces the sad, yet at the same time exhilarating, moments of transition that represent the very core of this day. More than any other year, I, too, share these feelings with today's graduating class. For me, too, this is a time to look back at what has been achieved, before, as usual, passing on a few words of advice for the future. So please indulge me for a few minutes whilst I reminisce, not because I want to bore today's generation with stories about "the good old days", but because the past will always have lessons to teach us, if only we are able to tune in and listen.

I have been called the keeper of Brentwood's traditions because I am passionate about preserving those values and beliefs that have so quickly helped shape this School into one of Canada's premier academic institutions. However, the truth is that my role has been less important than the collective guardianship of the School's traditions by successive graduating classes. I have watched the exciting maturation that has taken place in every group of grads. The sum of their Brentwood knowledge, understanding, and experience has produced not only a set of strong Brentwood principles for the next class to emulate, but also a guide book to follow as each one of them leaves the School for the last time.

The Brentwood of which we are all a part, passes on a lot more than mere knowledge. It teaches wisdom, which, according to the dictionary, is "accumulated philosophic learning, good sense, and a wise attitude or action". And this makes all the difference because, I am proud to say, Brentwood graduates have been less interested in their standard of living than their quality of life. By creating meaningful lives for themselves, they have truly been able to make a difference to the world in which they live.

This tradition of making a difference goes all the way back to the original School and outstanding old Brentonians like John Stubbs, a graduate of RNC Dartmouth, who, as captain of HMCS Assiniboine and HMCS Athabaskan in World War 11, became one of Canada's most decorated heroes of the Battle of the Atlantic; Bill Bigelow, graduate of the University of Toronto Medical School, who pioneered the use of hypothermia in heart surgery as well as developing the cardiac pacemaker; and Ned Pratt, nationally renowned architect and Olympic medalist in rowing, as well as grandfather to Peter, one of today's graduates. The list from today's Brentwood, young though the School is, is no less impressive and includes Harvard-educated ethno-botanist and best-selling author, Wade Davis, who has brought to the attention of the world the plight of its indigenous peoples; David Wilkinson, an engineering graduate of UBC, who is currently leading the research team developing a new fuel cell; Beni Sung, whose outstanding professional career in the field of jewelry design gained him international recognition, climaxing in his being one of the youngest winners of the prestigious de Beers International Design Award; Geoff Hall, orthopedic surgeon, whose reconstruction of Silken Laumann's leg after her serious accident, enabled her to go on and win a medal for Canada in the Olympics; Toben Anderson, a successful Calgary fashion designer when she was diagnosed with breast cancer at age 38 and, who, after her double mastectomy and months of reconstructive surgery, took her 'never say die' attitude and, as founder of 'Climbing for a Cure', overcame 250 km per hour winds and minus 30 degrees Celsius temperatures to conquer Vinson Massif, Antarctica's highest mountain, in order to publicize her cause; David Asper, criminal defence lawyer, whose biggest case was winning freedom for David Milgaard, but who also spends many days and weeks on the remote northern Manitoba Indian reserve circuit; Sheila Serup, who, though completely deaf, graduated from Brentwood and today is a freelance journalist in the Yukon and a Level III biathlon coach, responsible for many of the fine young Dane and Inuit athletes who recently have come out of Canada's north; Bart Melhuish-, graduate in Engineering from RMC Kingston, and brother to Naomi of today's Class of '98, who, as a Canadian Forces Hercules pilot, not only has flown a number of dangerous rescue missions in Canada's north, but also flew UN humanitarian aid and supplies into war-ravaged Bosnia and Rwanda; and, finally, amongst recent graduates, even before they went on to post-secondary education, Asha Rao and Elisha Kamell -- Asha, who joined Youth Challenge International and overcame physical harassment from the military while working with the poor hill farmers of Guatemala, and Elisha, who, as a volunteer at the Royal National Institute for the Blind School in Malvern, England, spent a year being the eyes for a blind student studying 'A' Level History of Art.

I could go on and on and I am sure that other Brentwood teachers could produce a completely different list, for Brentwood graduates' contributions to their communities and their country have been far out of proportion to the size of the School which remains, even today, very small by North American standards. As in the case of Gresham's School, one is tempted to ask, once again, why has this school produced so many interesting, concerned, and unique individuals, all of whom have gone on to lead challenging and fulfilling lives that truly have made a difference? The answer, I believe, is all around us today, within this community we call Brentwood; a unique and peerless place where all of us are encouraged to contribute and to make a difference.

To you, the Class of '98, who are leaving and will soon be carrying the Brentwood torch of personal responsibility and accountability out into the troubled world outside the School gates, I ask that you, too, remember well what you have learned here. Brentwood's focus has always been to emphasize the role of the individual in the community: the need to strive for the common good. Brentwood has tried to push its students to the limit in all areas of endeavour in order to bring out the best in each one of them. All Brentwood students, slowly but surely, become immersed in values and beliefs that are timeless in their honesty and soundness. This mission of integrity, commitment and service, so closely associated with one of the true architects of this school, the late Mr. T. Gil Bunch, the much-loved and revered assistant headmaster whose untimely death we all mourned earlier this year, is, I believe exemplified in the '98 Grad Class now sitting before us. They have shown they know how to be true leaders, always willing to answer the call to work and care for the greater community that exists beyond themselves. Why? Because this philosophy is in the genes of our school and this class has shown, through its service to the students of Brentwood, that the School's ideals are alive and well and flourishing. Thus, I am supremely confident that this fine group that we salute today will go on to lead the kind of satisfying lives that characterized so many of the lives of their predecessors at Brentwood.

Today's ceremony, of course, is an especially poignant moment for me as I ask myself what advice I can offer this very special group of young people, the last of twenty-two such groups numbering, unbelievably, two thousand, one hundred and thirty-three students since 1976! Upon reflection, my message is very simple -- remember that success is not a destination but a journey -- a journey during which you will be tested to the very core of your being. And during that journey, never lose sight of those higher ideals that characterized your efforts this year as the guides and mentors of this school. Above all, be aware as never before of the false values that exist all around you. You will see them every day of your lives; on the sports field, in the political arena, in the work place, in all the glittering achievements so celebrated by today's media. Always ask yourself how much of what you do will actually have any meaning for those who come after you. In a 1986 Commencement Speech to Stanford Graduates, TV political correspondent Ted Koppel, said, "we are imposing on our minds the same burdens we have inflicted on our stomachs -- pre-cooked ideas designed to appeal to the largest number of people at the lowest possible price: McThought!"

Dare to think differently. Remember those whom I named, former members of this school who have shown you a real and meaningful road to follow. Use them as guides, for they are merely at a different stage along the same journey as you, and remember also those like next year's grads who are following you, for you will be the signposts for them. Listen to the moving words of Walt Whitman whose wise thoughts transcend the passage of time and the passing of generations:

'It avails not, time nor place -- distance avails not.
I am with you, you men and women of a generation, or ever so many generations hence.
Just as you feel when you look on the river and sky,
so I felt.
Just as any of you is one of a living crowd, I was one of a crowd.
Just as any of you are refreshed by the gladness of the river and the bright flow, I was refreshed.
Just as you stand and lean on the rail, yet hurry with the swift current, I stood yet was hurried.

Don't ever be afraid to dream. Dreams provide the fuel that allows us to strive for perfection. Remember, dreamers will always make a difference, because they dare to challenge the status quo. Never allow anyone to take your dreams and aspirations away from you because only by sticking to them can you find true meaning to your life.

The world outside the School gates is not your world yet. You have to make it your world. Help make things happen and you will be amazed at what you can accomplish.

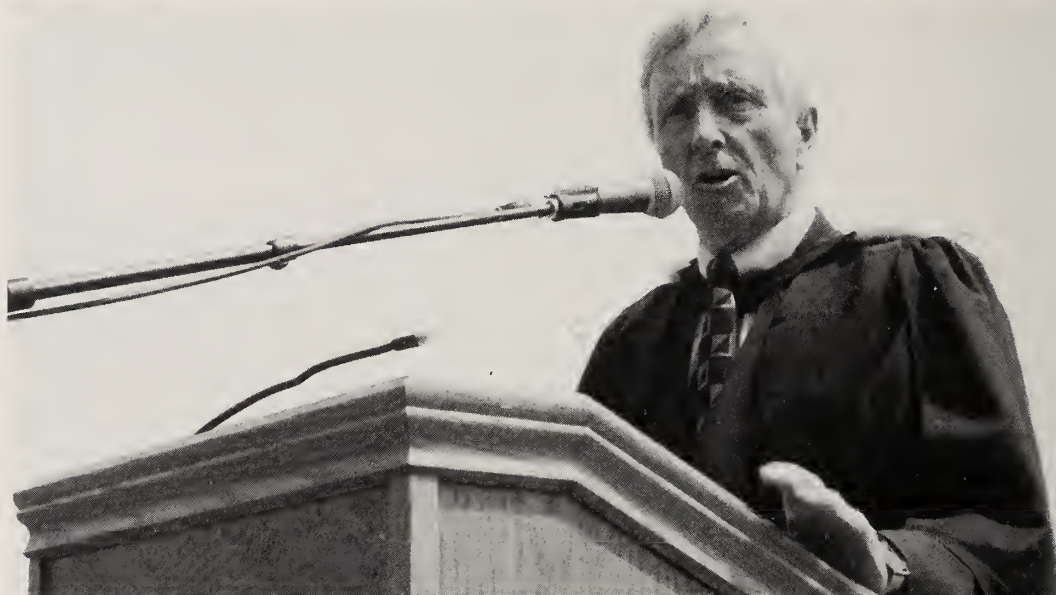

Today is not the end but merely the prelude to another beginning. You are terrific, and my own admiration and regard and hope for you could not be greater. You have meant more than you know to Brentwood and to me, in your time here. I wish you a bold and fulfilling journey.

BE IT RESOLVED THAT this year, the Brentwood Debating Society, led by the almighty Rob Maclean, proved to be quite competitive, both within the school and abroad, managing several successes, in addition to a couple more feats. To kick off the Debating season, the team traveled to Vancouver to participate in the Newman-F.I.S.A. tournament, hosted by Croften House. After three rounds of impromptu debating, Brentwood pulled through: in the Senior category, Naomi Melhuish and David Leckie each placed in the top 20, and in pairs, Naomi and Luwam Sebhatu placed 10th. In the Junior category, Tom Aylward-Nally and Paul Conway competed together and each placed in the top 15.

In November '97, the Ravenhurst Debating Tournament, hosted by Dover Bay Secondary in Nanaimo, proved to be the most successful for the Brentwood team this year. Debating both sides of the issue, Canada becoming a republic, the team's extensive preparation paid off. In the Senior division, Tom Aylward-Nally left with an impressive 3rd place trophy. His partner, Paul, also finished well in 5th place, with Luwam close behind in 7th place. Simon Johnson and Liam Cooper each placed in the top 20. In pairs, Luwam and Liam finished 3rd, while Tom and Paul held onto 2nd. As a combined team, Luwam, Liam, Simon, and Brian Code held 2nd overall. In the Junior division, the Kris Baker/Taichi Yoneya and the Sarah Mahoney/Jorde Geothals teams placed in the top 10, with Sarah placing 6th and Kris finishing 8th individually. Combined, Sarah, Jorde, Rumi Guzder and partner, Matt Foulger, placed 6th overall. In the Grade Eight division, Steve Pierce, Georgia Murray, And Carmen Addario-Barry all finished in the top 15 individually. In pairs, Steve and Georgia placed well, in 5th place, and placed 4th with the combined team, along with Carmen and Daniel O'Shea; A superb performance by the team.

The 1998 Island Championships in Victoria early in the second term was the last competition for the Brentwood Debating team. Hosted by Glen-Lyon Norfolk School, Brentwood's glory continued to shine. Most notably, the Brentwood team had two qualifying competitors for the B.C. Provincial Debating and Speech Arts Championships: Paul Conway and Simon Johnson. Even more impressive was Simon's superior performance, as he proudly finished as the number one public speaker in the province. Congratulations, Simon! Well done to all Brentwood Debators and all the best next season!

Enter Autumn

Tom Aylward-Nally
Grade 10

It came suddenly, creeping like a serpent in the shadows, unnoticed by all but a few. It lingered there for days, waiting, watching... For the right moment.

And then the attack came, the fiery serpent of autumn sinking its fangs deep into the neck of the Indian summer. Yet few noticed that the venom of autumn had pervaded the world around them, and fewer still were expecting it. The first sign of the troubles ahead was shown by the leaves. Their surface lost its verdant green sheen to a skeleton of golden sandpapery rootlets. As the nights grew darker and longer, their fieriness grew, as if to make up for the growing gloominess around them, until they shone hotter than the distant sun. Their crispy red-brown tips began to curl up, saluting the far-off reaches of the lands above and then crackling in the stiff autumn breeze. Then, in a final blaze of glory, the leaves let go of their oppressive bonds to the mother tree and crashed to the earth. They dropped like stones past their colleagues of varying color, before they hit the ground in one last spectacular suicide run to the earth that had spawned them, joining the corpses of many other leaves in a vast boiling sea of bright red-orange death. It was as if the pyres of hell themselves had blanketed the peaceful woods.

As the carnage of the leaves continued, the arrival of autumn began to be noticed by the denizens of the planet, both human and non. The squirrels, knowing somehow that the arrival of autumn was but a prelude to the greater a beast of winter, began preparations immediately to weather out the attack. So, driven by sheer ignorance coupled with an uncanny sense of instinct, they began work, like a platoon of the US National Guard, digging earnestly so that they could bury enough nuts to survive the months ahead, a prospect that even the squirrels must have considered unlikely. While the chatter of the squirrels echoed through the gladed woods, a cold, stiff North wind blew, moving heavy clouds that soon would carry snow into position in the sky, using the darkened horizon as a staging area for their upcoming assault. The entire world began to darken underneath this formidable mantle in the sky, an utter bleakness permeated through all things, as if the artist who had painted an idyllic scene of summer had painted over his work with a deep wash of gray. The shadows that covered everything in a gloomy mirth took on a life of their own, growing exponentially with every passing day, and slowly every ounce of color that could be found in the wood drained away, wrung out by Mother Nature's washerwomen as she did her seasonal laundry. As the lengthening nights stole the cricket-soaked evenings of summer, it was no longer a secret: The curtain had dropped on summer, and the season of death was upon the world. In the confines of the theatre of the new seasons, a new command was cried out from stage left, "Enter, autumn."

Earth Song

Katrina Wechselberger
Grade 8

They say you hear the Earth Sing,
The rivers rushing, the birds twittering,
The grasshoppers chirping, the wind howling.
If you ever stopped to listen,
You'd think the world was perfect;
At least that's what they say.

But have you ever really listened?
'Cause if you have,
These glorious sounds would not be heard.
But drowning away these beautiful songs,
Are the noises and clamours,
That, we, ourselves make.

FIRST TERM WINNERS

Autumn's Flight

Sara Skoretz

Grade 9

The air is cool and crisp. The scent of autumn's trace is here. Our cue has been given, we must leave now to find our place in the sun. We will return though, but not for a long time. We take our flight now, a long and treacherous journey lies ahead. The take off, our wings raise us into the velvet blue heavens. Looking down upon a patch work quilt, filled with warm harvest colors. All the colors, rust, orange, apricot, sulfur, amber and olive-gold make up autumn's magnificent complexion. The shades, tints, and tones all add up to the brilliant highlights of autumn's splendor. Beneath the sound of our soft smooth feathers is a constant humming noise, a noise of humans and their traffic. Human noise is so unlike the noise of swift sensuous air blowing through our chocolate rich feathers. Our sound is peaceful and not rushed like winter's breeze. The earth is speckled with azure blue lakes that reflect our formation of a V. The reflection shows the autumn fight from one generation to the next. Strong bonds of rhythmic autumn call us, the geese.

Earth Song

Grade 12

I had this dream of tree boughs	The chapel bells have been rung
Weaving the weeping sun	And they're rearing to elope.
As secretly as silent vows	If Jesus was hung,
Conjure the imagination	Would we all pray to a rope?

These vivid scenes are	Perchance if I die,
All that I remember.	And am coveted by vultures
We're shackled to a star	Would you come to lie
On that day in December.	With all grieving cultures?

Exoneration is bliss.	And with my last graceful breath
It sweeps the air in tenderness	I shall recount my history
Nature's sweet kiss	For if there's glory in death,
Is planted here in holiness.	It's that it's a mystery.

I will row for Cambridge with a full rowing scholarship and get my honors degree in law. Following that I will play for Heart of Midlothian Football Club on my Saturdays and discover new planets on my Sundays. I will perform open-heart surgery while giving a thorough talk on Scottish Independence and host juggling marathons on my back lawn to raise funds for the hearing impaired. I will do Irish jigs for nickels and will recite MacBeth, Ivanhoe, Hamlet, or Kidnapped on command free of cost. I will turn down the lead role in "Riverdance" twice in order to pursue my career in sports medicine. I will council disturbed animals and reunite the Beatles (except Lennon) in my spare time. I will speak with Elvis and do sports commentary for BBC Scotland. Wouldn't that be nice! But first I have to graduate from Brentwood.

It was a rainy day in spring. The flowers were blooming, the trees were blossoming, and negotiations with Iraq had been reduced to childish bickering. Upon return to the United States, President Clinton issued the immediate order to confirmation of a full, airborne strike.

At six o'clock Saturday morning, the abrupt staccato ring of the phone startled Vincent Young from his sleep. After three rings, fully awake, he answered it. "Hello," he muttered.

"Is this Captain Vincent Young?" a harsh voice demanded. It was General Cracken.

"Yes sir," he replied, straining to keep his voice from crackling.

"Well get your ass down to the base," he barked, "we're going to war with Iraq!"

Young muttered "yes sir" before the general hung up. His worst nightmare had come true.

"What was that all about?" his wife Vanessa yawned beside him.

Young could hardly speak. "Clinton's declared war on Iraq," he said, his voice icy. "They want me to come along." Vanessa burst into tears.

The five-minute drive to the base was the longest five minutes of Young's life. He had always feared that this would happen.

The briefing was short and to the point. Saddam Hussein's mysterious mountain containing all the chemical and biological weapons had been located, and was to be leveled to the ground. Also, Hussein's home estate was to be destroyed, preferably with him inside. The strategy was a simple hit-and-run procedure: a small group of Stealth Bombers would fly to their designated targets, flanked by two squadrons of F-18's, one led by Captain Young, the other by Captain Darrel Johnson. The F-18's would eliminate Iraqi fighters and ground weapons as the stealths dropped their bombs. Then the F-18's would cover their escaped vector.

Once he was in the air, Young could not believe what was happening. As a child, he had always been at the butt end of practical jokes; he had been humiliated, trampled upon, and now, all of a sudden, the destiny of the world lay in his hands....

Life, shall I compare thee to a chess game
You force me to think ahead
I get up in the morning
And at night I got to bed
Sometimes you let me be the king, and
I get to make the rules
Sometimes I'm a pawn, just one of many fools
Sometimes I'm strong and solid as a rook
And sometimes I feel weak and foolish like a shnook
Sometimes I'm a knight, sly and clever like a fox
But when this knight is careless
He ends up in a box
Sometimes I'm a bishop, calm and peaceful and tall
But sometimes even bishops trip and take a clumsy fall
Sometimes in the future, you make me choose a queen
But whether my choice will be wise and true
Remains yet to be seen.

There are lots of pieces on the chessboard and
We get to play them all -
Soon enough it will be checkmate
Time for all to fall

Shall I compare you to... to... this poem?

You, you silly, are nothing like a poem.

Poems are words. Bunches of them. Carefully placed, for special

Effect.

You're not like that. You're always, here, and this, but not with the placing of words. Stop. Don't even think about it...

Oh well. This always happens. In reflecting deeply on what, on what you are

What are you?

I become detached, and pensive, and forget all about

What you, no, who you are, and my very image of you blurs whenever I affix and definitions, or limitations, on what is your nature

What is your nature?

You, you are nothing like this poem.

You have the answers- you know, and in knowing, hint at some elusive, some memory of a shadow of a trace, lingering...

What? What is it you have, and know, and hide from me? Why is it that I cannot know, even for a poem, this poem, why is it that I can find nothing, that when I try to describe you I fail?

Do I know you?

Yes, I believe, and with such conviction as is bestowed...

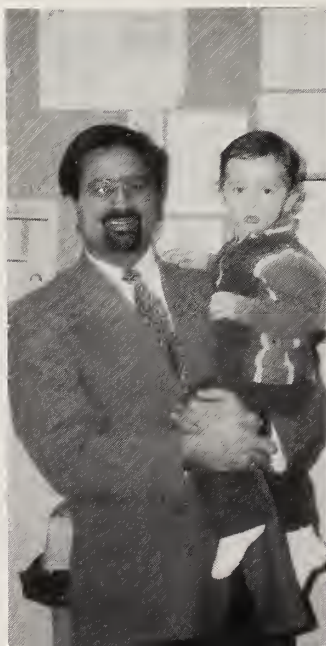

Can I know you?

Grade 8

Surrounding me are my busy-looking walls, full of photos, snapshots from the past, snapshots of the time once lived, a life once alive. Each photo, pinned up crookedly, or straight, is special in its own way. Each of them is an unearthly reminder, a memory so vivid, so I will never forget. Every
memory's. Sometimes I wish I could go back to that happy, care-free life, I once lived. Every moment was an adventure. I had no worries, or unforbidding problems of my own.
Sitting down now, I look closely at one of my colourful memories pinned on the wall. Looking at that snapshot, my body filled with longing for that wonderful, happy day on the beach, with my brand-new kite soaring over me, and my dad right behind me. So many things I took for granted...

Back then, one day, the closest I would be to my dad, was two flights away. This picture spoke 1000 words I could almost hear the child in the picture's laughter as the kite was whirled around with a gust of wind
This picture is trapped inside the page, it is a memory, held within the paper's limits. Now, a lost life, a feeling long gone, gone with the wind as the kite was pulled from the child's hands. It doesn't show it in that forgetful photo, but shortly after, as I remember, the child slipped and the kite that brought so much happiness was whirled into the sea. Just as I had a life full of joy and no cares, I was pulled away, sent like a package among unfamiliar faces to unfamiliar lands, and cast, like the kite, into the sea.

GRAD FORMAL '98

VALEDICTORIAN

Thank you Mr. Ross. Honored guests, Ladies and Gentlemen, and students, I am humbled by being chosen to represent this class of such awesome people and honored to be their representative on such a special day in all of our lives. This scene here today is one that we have looked forward to for many years but lately, dreaded. Twenty-six of us here present have watched others graduating for the last four years. To my fellow lifers and all of those that have joined us in grades 9, 10, 11 and 12, every year enriching our grade, I salute you and thank you for being such a big part of my life and members in the cast of the Brentwood five act play. A play in which one act is one year.

Act One - Grade 8 - We noticed a slight change from our previous elementary schools where we were the kings and queens, to here where we were right back at the bottom again. Our retaliation - we forgot our books and lost our school bags every single day, by accident. We played rugby and hockey by swarming on the ball or running as far away from it as we could. One worry plagued me every day after sport - what if all of those communal shower stories are true? I soon found out that yes, it is true, Rogers house does have communal showers. Soon, we became grade 12 slaves and endeared ourselves to our house parents and advisors in many charming ways.

Act Two - Grade 9 - We became incredibly good at manipulating language and telling half truths, for instance - "I swear I gave it to her Mr. Martin, the switchboard lady must have lost it." We realized that we were not the youngest anymore and made the grade 8's realize it as well. We rediscovered the beach and all of its uses. We aged our house parents and let everyone know how much better and smarter we were than them.

Act Three - Grade 10 - We learnt to experiment. We enjoyed science class too. A few of us became very well acquainted with Mr. Ross through repeated visits to his office followed by a 6-day vacation. Girls seemed to develop... excellent personalities. Some of us would agree that this was the best year... So good in fact that they would do it twice. Some of us became incredible athletes, some writers and some artists as we began to realize our potential. It was a time of friendship. Our house parents became more human.

Act Four - Grade 11 - Yay, we don't have to play rugby anymore! Oh wait, yes we do, but a lot of us developed unexplainable back and knee problems that chronically hurt on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. We began to get serious and more involved in our academics. Marks actually mattered. Our ranks swelled with interesting and talented people who enriched our cast. Our houseparents became our friends.

Act Five - Grade 12 - The climax of the play. We unite and celebrate our lives here together. The school that we have known until now has changed. It has been passed down to us until finally it is our school. We emerge as leaders in the houses, on the playing fields and in our social settings. We apply to Universities and Colleges. Then we prepare to leave. As we prepare for our final curtain call at Brentwood, we realize how much we are going to miss our house parents and especially each other.

We thank our Producers, our parents. Many of you made great sacrifices to allow us to come here. By allowing us to come here, you have sacrificed the opportunity to watch us slowly grow into the young men and women that are here today. You must have missed us. We sure missed you. We thank you deeply and sincerely for the opportunities you presented us with, and hope that today you mirror our pride in our accomplishments.

We thank our Directors, the teaching staff. These men and women who have not only taught us, but also guided us, encouraged us and molded us into the students, athletes and artists that sit before you today. I know I speak for all of us when I thank you for your compassion, empathy and tolerance.

And to the extras, the support staff who washed our clothes, cut our hair, fed us, cleaned our houses, drove us to the ferry and, sent us the bills for all of it. We thank you.

To the returning students we pass the torch, trusting you to guide Brentwood into the 21st century. My only advice to you is that you take the time to enjoy every minute.

William Shakespeare said, "All the world's a stage and all the men and women merely players". We, the graduating class have completed our roles on this, the Brentwood stage. Soon, we leave to take on new challenges, but in doing so we take with us the memories of the parts we played in class, in relationships, in sharing, in caring, crying and laughing together. Memories that are rich. The making of these memories formed bonds which may be stretched in the future all over Canada and the world, but can never be broken. Our graduating class of 1998 has formed lasting friendships which will endure the test of time.

This coming week as we, the graduates of 1998, leave this school; the curtains will close on this part of our lives. We will say goodbye to our friends today with a medley of emotions. Mostly we will be sad to be parting with our close friends and so I will close with T.S. Elliot's words, "Friendship should be more than biting time can sever" We will hold dear our ties to Brentwood and to all of the relationships we have shaped here.

~ Alex Bradley

BELL HOUSE

If these walls could talk...

With baby Mathias cradled in my arms, I wander around the house. All is quiet, for the girls are at their Fine Arts: Angela is sculpting the final touches on what Mrs. Elmes has dubbed her "first born", a rather large piece of pottery; Emily Effa is "cybernating" in the Computer lab creating a web page; Lisa is bringing dolphins to life with each stroke of her paint brush; Emily Procter is dancing, preparing for Friday's performance; and Terrah is hitting the high notes with her fabulous voice. What a range of diverse talents we have living within these walls!

Touring from room to room, I glance at the walls around me - the walls that make up what has affectionately become known as Bell House - and I muse to myself, "If only these walls could talk!" If only these walls could talk, they'd tell many a tale. Tales about flying pumpkins; carving pumpkins; cooking lessons at Simon's; building a gingerbread house; a Christmas party; Christmas stocking surprises; Santa and Mrs. Claus; Mr. Bell's oranges; the birth of Mathias; fridge door quotations; banana bread; an April Fool's prank (by the way, who did that?); birthday parties; dancing on the lawn; South Park-ing; Peek-a-boo showers; in-house breakfasts; surprise guest inspectors; Ouija board; a Mother's Day tea party; Angela's late night jokes; EM-E's computer karaoke; EM-P's common room workouts; Lisa's movie picks; Terrah's lemons; the Matt Mobile; pizza and games night; the House outing to Victoria; and our House dinner.

As the year winds down in these final days, I am saddened to think of the girls' departure, when these walls will grow quiet, and cold. What started in September as a group of girls who shared a roof in common and not much else, grew into a family of sisters who learned to appreciate each other and, what is more, to love each other. Next year, Lisa and Emily Effa will warm these walls once again for their grade 12 year. Angela, however, will leave us for England where she'll attend university in a castle (that's so like Angela, to choose 'the road less travelled'). Emily Procter will be in Burkmar House next year, and Terrah in Alex House. The truth, however, is that none of these five Bell Belles will ever be gone, for each one is permanently nestled within my heart, and each one has etched her story within these walls.

ALEX HOUSE

"Five years have passed, five summers with the length of five long winters." (William Wordsworth). I find myself looking back on what has been for me, an incredible journey. I came to this school from a small town, never having been away from home and found myself thrown into this global community with not a single familiar face and no way to get home! There were five of us, Alex House grade eights, that first year. We were all in the same boat and together we worked out what being a student at Brentwood was all about. After five years, Angela, Lindsay, Lauren, Naomi and I are still here. We have been joined over the years by a great bunch of girls who this year made up a solid team of house prefects. Whether having been here for two years or five, in these last weeks of term we all find ourselves looking back on what it has meant to be part of Brentwood. It has been both a challenge and a pleasure for all of us to lead Alex House through this '97/'98 school year, the 25th year of girls at Brentwood.

In December, the annual Gingerbread House Competition took place. By pooling all of our creative energy the girls of Alex House produced perhaps the most fantastic looking gingerbread house any of us had ever seen, and it certainly stood out on the judge's table proudly flying the Alex flag! For our efforts that secured us a comfortable first place, the first time ever that Alex had won, we were rewarded by a special dinner at the cafeteria which we all very much enjoyed.

Again in the second term, our girls shone with their creative energy and spirit when we hosted a very successful open house. The house was transformed, each floor with a different theme. Everybody joined in and, apart from our beautiful Queen clock suffering a terrible fate, everyone had a great night. Money was raised that was later used to fund a house outing to Victoria, as well as a great night of "rock'n glow" bowling in Duncan.

This year will certainly be remembered for all the great times we had, but sadly this year will also be remembered as the year that the school suffered a terrible loss. For as long as I can remember, Mrs. Pitt has been a part of Alex house. The stories of Sunday tea-time will echo through the hallways of Alex for years to come, and the memories of the love that she showed us will live on. I will always remember this remarkable lady who asked so little of us for her sake, yet got so much pleasure from the love we had for her. She will be sorely missed.

And so we approach the end of another year. To Mrs. Mais I give so much thanks for seeing me through five years of Brentwood. For all of Alex House, "Thank you" to both Mrs. Mais and Ms. Walker for a fantastic year, for always being there to look after us. I, and the rest of the grade twelves, thank all of the Alex House girls for being so supportive of us; we are all going to really miss you....Good luck next year!

MACKENZIE HOUSE

A HOUSEMASTER'S DIARY

Monday

- 5:30 Woke up, twitching uncontrollably, from a nightmare. Dreamt that the school leaving age in BC was raised to 19. Aaaagh! Those grade 12's would be back for another year.
- 7:45 Go into House. It is often held to be one of the great spiritual rewards of housemastering, the morning confrontation with those scrubbed and shining faces, and to hear the ringing, youthful tones of the dawn chorus, "Good morning, Mr. Housemaster, Sir", shouted in high good spirits and unison. Why this is so, I don't know, for it is neither spiritually rewarding, nor true. One might just get a grunt from some bleary-eyed damsel and a sour stare from some apparently deaf-mute prefect.
- 8:05 Hide in closet and lock study door. Am trembling. Crouch in the dark, holding damp sock to my mouth and nose with one hand and holding left ear with other.
- 8:10 Re-emerge refreshed. Tall, blond-haired school prefect, breathing recently inhaled DuMaurier fumes, complains that member of staff confiscated her cigarettes, vodka bottle and pet Rottweiler during class yesterday, and beat her up when she complained. (Must remember to ask Mr. Wynne to tone down his militant Christianity.) Told prefect this was a serious matter, to which she replied what could you expect from an Irishman. Started to explain I didn't mean that, when the bell for first class rings.
- 8:50 Go to staffroom for coffee. Contemplate future in teaching. Break into tears, Mrs. Pennells comforts me. Feel worse. Go to class.
- 9:05 Set off to teach French 10 - I feel a bit like Daniel. Only ten of original 24 still in class. The rest have been suspended, expelled, garrotted, crucified (Mr. Wynne again). Of the ten there, two are Playboy, two are reading Playgirl, one is shaving, two are asleep, two are doing homework, one is crouched in the corner with glazed (he's been there since last September - I think he's left).
- 10:50 Ah, Monday. Assembly - the gathering together of our school community to share in our successes and gain pride in our achievements. The Headmaster speaks briefly and is given a standing ovation.
- 1:15 Lunch. I retreat to the sanctuary of my own peaceful home. I can hardly wait. My wife awaits my arrival calmly and informs me in her own soft spoken way that the bathroom duties were not done, two toilets are plugged, shoes have been left all over the foyer and he "Buns of Steel" video has been stolen again. I gasp in amazement, how will we ever survive the week. The door bell rings, the first of 34 requests for money chits, How can they all need feminine hygiene products on the same day? As a member of the 'weaker sex', I shake my head and sign the chits. Retreat to study, climb into closet, lock door and throw away the key.
- 2:30 Rugby. A brief respite from the trials and tribulations of being a housemaster. I spend two hours amongst quiet, mild-mannered, esoteric men, and Mr. Medina's there too. Return to house refreshed and mentally stimulated by the deep philosophical reflections of the first XV forwards.
- 5:00 Back into House. Assembled, ragged 'couch potatoes' rouse themselves from torpor to whistle and jeer at my rugby shorts. Suddenly I hear, "Can I go on weekend leave beginning on Tuesday this week?! My brother's graduating with an M.Litt in Oral Hygiene from the Chiropody Dept. at Uvic." Sounds plausible to me, I grant permission. Twenty-nine other similarly credible requests are received and granted for weekend leave beginning on Tuesday. Perhaps the Headmaster will cancel Saturday classes.
- On second thought,.....
- 6:30 Prep begins. Two hours of focused study. One can hear a pin drop; apart from the melodious snoring of the duty staff. Prefects rule the floors with the help of salivating, roaming Rottweilers. At 7:55, the eerie silence is broken. It's time for 'Beverly Hills, 90210'. "We can't miss it - it's the season finale again." One student asks permission. Three minutes later, forty-three young ladies are salivating at some broad-shouldered, narrow-waisted stud. No, not me!
- 10pm-1am Bedtimes run smoothly, quickly and efficiently. Everyone is in bed by 1am. Outfits for Tuesday have been borrowed, ironed and modelled. Socials assignments have been completed. Telephones and toilets have been unplugged. Tears have been shed. Most house duties have been done. Shoes have been picked up, borrowed, stolen, returned and borrowed again.
- 1:00am Remember to go to bed. Kiss sleeping wife. She grunts her undying love and admiration, "Where the hell have you been?!"
- 5:30am Wake up, twitching uncontrollably, from a nightmare. Dreamt that Tuesday will be just like Monday.

Sundays will never be the same in Mackenzie House

Imagine the scene: 10:44 Sunday morning - you can hear the young male 'predators' saying, "it's time to go, lads". 10:45 A metallic blue Jetta docks and anchors at the back of the house. Dot is arriving to start work at noon. Her loving husband, Reg, gets out and goes to open his wife's door. Dot gets out, dressed in her best green suit and stiletto shoes (sneakers and pants for end of year clean-up only). They walk arm in arm to the door and Dot enters. This is the way every Sunday began for the last six years for me, my wife, Nicole and Mackenzie House.

Spryly, full of energy and smiles for everyone, she heads for her post. She enters the study, aghast at the mess that greets her, puts her purse in the filing cabinet, dismisses the Housemaster or Assistant, reads the house book and sets to her task. People come and people go, but Dot's always there. Young boys with little experience enter by the wrong door and are quickly dispatched. Shoes are picked up and neatly stored. The common room "canoodlers" are discouraged. She looks for the week's 'malfaiteurs'. Nobody? She looks askance. "Are the Linns being too soft and indulgent again?" Naughty girls, her favourites, are located and are taken to the trunk room. The girls set to the task, at first reluctantly, but later willingly as they observe the energy and enthusiasm of our Mrs. Pitt. At the end of two hours, the trunk room is spotless and Mrs. Pitt has won two new friends and admirers. Reg phones to check all is well.

The duty prefect arrives at 1:30pm, to start her work at noon. She is given her orders for the day. Most important of all, cover the House during Mrs. Pitt's tea break in Alex House at 3pm.

Order has been established where chaos had reigned. Rooms have been tidied, guests have been greeted, everyone has been made to feel important and noticed. The young ones, especially, are treated with genuine care and affection. "Don't grow up too quickly", she urges them. "Enjoy your innocence and youth, it's a special time." Reg phones to check all is well.

One last check of the common room. One last chase around the house. One last sharing of photographs and reminiscences. One last phone call from Reg.

At 6:15pm, the Housemaster arrives to start duty at 6pm. Dot is there, faithful to her post. She shows off her work of the day. The study is spotless, the foyer, the common room, the trunk room are immaculate. All is quiet. Everyone feels renewed, revived. One last voicing of concern to the Housemaster. Yes, Dot and I didn't always see eye to eye. How could a male understand the world of Mackenzie House? There are only three people who can press my buttons: my mother, my wife and Dot. She would suggest, always respectfully, that things didn't used to happen like this. "But, Dot", I protested, "I've been here for six years now" The frustrating thing, of course, is that Dot, like my mother and my wife, was almost always right.

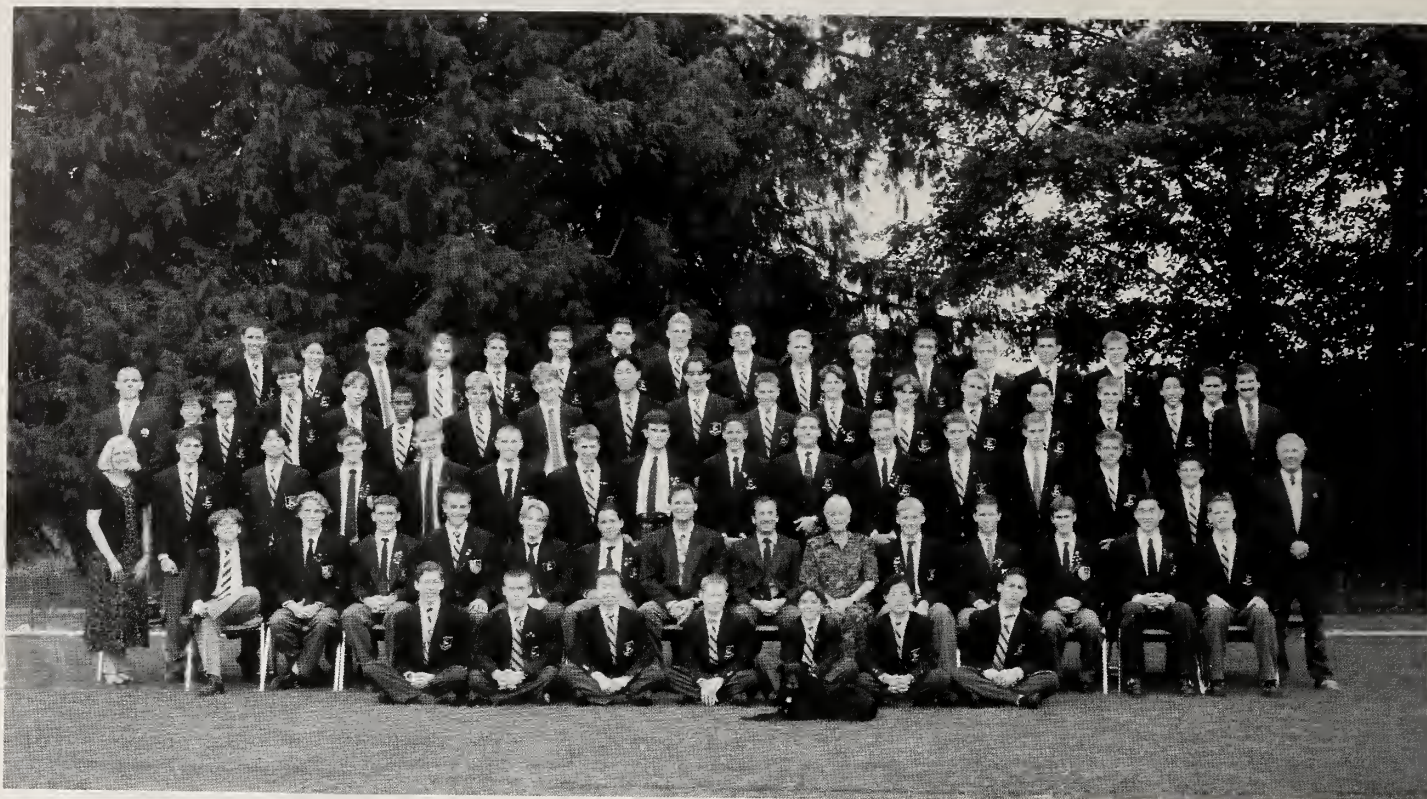

At 6:20pm, Dot picks up her coat and removes her purse from the filing cabinet. She thanks everyone for allowing her to come in, she wishes us well for the week. She tells us that she'll be arriving a little early for duty next week (I think we know this), and that she has enjoyed her day in her own 'Lotusland'. At 6:22 the Jetta departs from the back of Mackenzie House. Immediately, as if by magic, boys reappear in the foyer.

Sundays will never be the same in Mackenzie House. We will miss Dot and all the things she did for us each and every Sunday. We will strive to keep flourishing the qualities of enthusiasm, energy, caring and love for life that Dot brought to our community. She deserves nothing less.

Farewell, Dot.

ELLIS HOUSE

Ian's Odyssey or Seven Years in Tibet

Many years ago, into the Land of Ellis came a tall, dark-haired youth –
Ian of Prince Edward Island,
Son of Henry.

With a past shrouded in mystery and a love of the sacred numbers,
this knight bestrode the kingdom of Brentwood, dispensing justice and
math help to all.

Armed with the clamp of death and towering above
the Ellisites, the Maritimer struck fear into the bullies of twelve and brought relief to the serfs of grommet.

Peace came to the Land of Ellis and with it a spirit of wondering and enlightenment.

What were these sports of Interhouse and why did we not covet the Holy Grail of Champions?

When we were told
to come forth,
why did we obey?

The standard of green
was raised and in three short years
the Unicorn was rampant.
On his black steed, Saab,
Ian of Henry moved with the speed of an arrow to and from the Garden City of Victoria.
Many maidens were rescued and the Malahat dragons of gloom were vanquished.

But, at length the restless spirit of his youth stirred within him and the moment of parting came.

The knights of Ellis raised their tribute and held their steel aloft in royal salute.

PRIVETT HOUSE

As we stood for the house picture at West Shawnigan Lake Park, I could sense an excitement. The camera clicked just as I felt shaving cream enter my ears ... next thing I knew I was in the lake covered head to toe in shaving cream. I should have known back then in June that this year's Grade 12 class would be full of fun and practical jokes. The current House Captain, Paul Kenway, the architect of that shaving cream attack brought to the House energy, loyalty and drive. He was infectious in motivating all of the guys. But he received a tremendous amount of help from his sidekick and roommate, Rob Nugent as well as lifer, Sean Wall. Together they made Privett the best House as always, where membership has its privileges! Every prefect from Peter Sloan and Ben Connor to Louis Yang and Stanley Jien helped to shape the mood of the House, Their leadership was tremendous in providing an example for everyone.

Yet the grade elevens were a strong group, as they demonstrated putting on a terrific 7th annual disco with organization and efficiency, They got help from the entire house, but did the bulk of the work themselves. As always the duty masters were great, though a little green, Mr. Medina, Mr. Elford and Mr. Atterbury.

We bid a fond farewell to the Johnstons, who have been the assistants in Privett for four years. They are heading across campus to take over Rogers House. So our friends now will soon become our opponents. At a special BBQ at the end of the year the House conveyed their thanks for all the time and effort the Johnstons have expended over the years.

Another great year and another wonderful group of grade twelves graduating. What a delight it has been. We wish them all good luck and wait eagerly for the next crop!

ROGERS HOUSE

From Frank Purdon's address to the house June 19, 1998;

Beginnings and endings is the theme of this service, which was established by my predecessor, John Allpress, nine years ago. For Alex Bradley, Tom Pennells and Alex Whitehouse, this is your fifth service. It was Mr. Allpress' intention to provide an occasion to promote reflection on what has been one or five years at Brentwood. For the latter, like Al, Tom and Alex, this represents more than a quarter of their lives spent here in Rogers House.

Rogers House is a special house – of course I am biased – but anyone on campus will tell you that there is something that sets this house apart. Maybe it is the location, maybe it is the showers. Whether it is just one year, like Ryan Weedon, six months like Brad Martin, or the full meal deal like the 'lifers' – you have, I hope benefited from your time here.

"It was the best of times, it was the worst of times, it was the age of wisdom, it was the age of foolishness, it was the season of light, it was the season of darkness, it was the spring of hope, it was the winter of despair,
we had everything before us, we had nothing before us, we were all going to heaven, we were all going direct the other way."

Charles Dickens, A Tale of Two Cities

A more appropriate thought I cannot imagine that better describes the contrast that everyone experiences here. Yes, there were bad times, but as I look out to you, I see winners. I see young men who have learned to cooperate, who have demonstrated compassion and understanding for those going through the rough times. And believe me, there are many of you who have been there. One never knows where a person has been unless one spends considerable time with them to listen and understand.

Before you, are four of your comrades who will share their feelings, as we prepare to part ways for a while.

Graham Haigh – Beginnings and endings. Saying a final goodbye to friends that you may never see again, or to friends with whom your association will never be the same, is for all a difficult thing to do. William Cowper, a British poet summarized my feelings by writing:

"What peaceful home I once enjoyed! How sweet the memory still!"

Each and every one of you have sweet memories and it is very easy for me to recall the sweet times – like the Interhouse track meet and barbeque, where the feeling of camaraderie and house spirit was especially apparent. As Neil Morriss said, "We really pulled together!" So, as we begin to part ways, cherish the memories, be thankful, and make new beginnings that flow from endings. Sir Winston Churchill said it best with reference to Egypt in 1942;

"This is not the end, it is not even the beginning of the end,

But it is perhaps the end of the beginning."

Chris Brodie – The underlying theme of my presentation this afternoon has been friendship. Samuel Johnson wrote that:

"If a man does not make new acquaintance as he advances through life, he will soon find himself left alone. A man, Sir, should keep his friendship in constant repair."

And remember these words of Cosmo Di Medici;

"We read that we ought to forgive our enemies, but we do not read that we must forgive our friends."

Alex Whitehouse – Beginnings and endings; I look at Ben, Jones, Myrf, Rex – four year men. You have spent a significant portion of your lives here. How much you have changed and then again, how little. Alphonse Karr, writer and former editor of "Le Figaro" said;

"Plus ça change, plus c'est la même chose."

Do not forget your roots, your experience – those things that make you. And above all, I wish that you acquire wisdom which, according to Sir Francis Bacon, the renowned English philosopher;

"... comes from experience and experience comes from time and time is composed of beginnings and endings that we piece together and call a lifetime."

Alex Bradley – As I say "Adieu!", listen to the words of Emerson;

"A friend may be reckoned the masterpiece of nature."

And Leo Tzu;

"The further one travels the less one knows."

WHITTALL HOUSE

Way back in September, a tiny tabby kitten, barely weaned, was found abandoned in the mall by the boys of Dorm 8. The boys assured me that it was a female. An immediate visit to the vet brought a frown to that lady's face. 'Who teaches Biology down there?' she asked. 'This is a male!' So began the Oscar saga. After much debate, it was agreed that he could stay, but must be the responsibility of the Dorm 8 boys at all times. He was allocated to Gr. 10 and we soon found him to be appropriately placed. He was disobedient, tested the boundaries, got into all sorts of trouble, was late for sign-in, made far too much noise and disturbance during prep and was, in other words, a typical Gr. 10. He quickly adapted to the hustle and bustle of residential life, got under everyone's feet during morning clean-up, came perilously close on several occasions when he was small, to being sucked up in one of the vacuums, peed indiscriminately and was thoroughly spoiled by everyone. Oscar Whittall has become one of the House family and has adopted us all. In his own way he has done much to provide a common bond and, thankfully, now uses his litter-box.

In other regards, the House has ticked along well during a year which has brought its share of joys and worries. If Inter-house results have been a little down this year, it has not been because of any lack of effort or desire on the part of the participants but more a function of any great depth of talent. (In any case, we wanted to be generous and let Rogers House have a chance to shine for once!)

After the initial shake-down of room arrangements at the end of September, the dorms slowly acquired their own unique characters. Dorm 2 had its cross to bear in the form of Taichi's amazing lack of order but then Edwin more than cancelled that out; Dorm 4 challenged every effort on my part to fail them on morning inspection and almost succeeded; Dorm 7 became one of the Gr. 12 evening social centres; Dorm 8 grew up a lot; Dorm 9 was very much the 'Odd Triple' - Jory, Tim and Alex could not have been more unlike in temperament yet managed to survive each other in spite of each other, hot debates raged in that room, usually on a Canada vs. U.S.A. theme but, more often than not, just for the sake of a debate (obviously some budding lawyers or politicians there); Dorm 14 survived the occupation of three Gr.8's, but barely - Nick, Connor and Isaac created a den which was home to them but amazed the occasional visitor; Dorm 18 might have doubled as a beauty parlor with Will as the proprietor; Mike, Rob and Jordy in Dorm 20, again created an 'interesting' decor. Dorm 21 was noteworthy in that on any given evening one could reasonably expect to find Frank fast asleep five minutes into prep and the predictable reaction from the duty master varied only in volume, not in content. And then there was Dorm 13..... ! What can I say ? Four Gr. 10's crammed into a room built for three, all of them fairly large, energetic, noisy and untidy yet all of them great supporters of the House. One might guess that conversation in that room was probably more hormonal than cerebral.

To our prefects and Gr. 12's we extend our thanks, our best wishes and the hope that the future will bring them all they hope for. Andrew Wray, as House Captain, has provided leadership of a quietly charismatic and empathetic nature in spite of his busy schedule; always ready to listen, to help and to give of his time and energy. He has been ably assisted by Dustin and Scott who have also given us leadership by example, and an extraordinary degree of commitment. Tyler, as Sports Captain has handled a lean year with a philosophical smile, has spurred the troops on to greater effort and has got the best from our limited resources. The other prefects have kept the House in line, have handled their roles with good sense and have provided a topping of maturity to the House community. My sincere and best wishes to you all.

My 'sabbatical' this year has taken me away from school from time to time but I have left the House in the hands of Martin Wright with full confidence. He is to be commended for his energy in assuming my duties on top of his own very considerable load during those periods and I thank him warmly for making my year that much easier and for keeping the ship afloat. Thanks are due, too, from us all, to Mr. Burrows, Mr. Maclean, Mr. Digby and Mrs. Kelly for suffering the slings and arrows of outrageous Whittallians over the year and for so freely giving of their time, their humour and their good sense.

Perfect Banana Bread

1 ¼ cups flour
5 egg whites
¾ cup frozen apple juice
pinch of salt, baking soda & baking powder
3 squished bananas

Mix everything together at once, accurate measuring not necessary. Pour into an ungreased pan and bake for 50 minutes. Cut away from sides immediately to prevent stickage. If the bread is trying to jump out of the pan - DO NOT FRET! This is common. Share this bread now with everyone (or hide it downstairs and let only 2 devour it!!)

CAUTION: DO NOT TRY THIS UNDER THE SUPERVISION OF A PARENT.

LIFE AT THE BURKMARS - ANITA SZERZE

When I first arrived at the Burkmars, I was greeted by Toby, the house dog. I was nervous and scared to leave my parents. The first couple of days I had a hard time adjusting to my new surroundings. It didn't take me long to become acquainted with my new houseparents. They greeted me warmly and made me feel like I was at home. A few good things about living at the Burkmars:

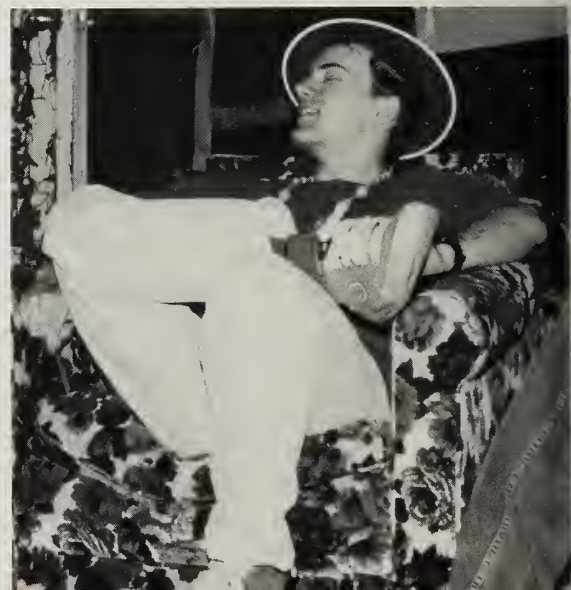

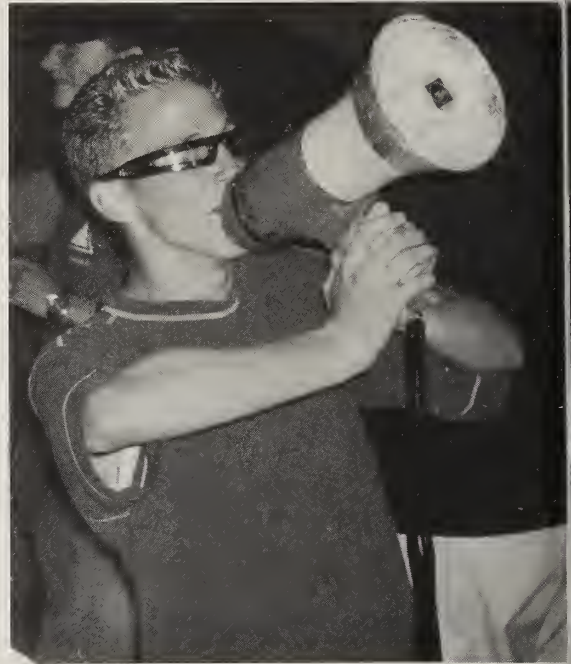

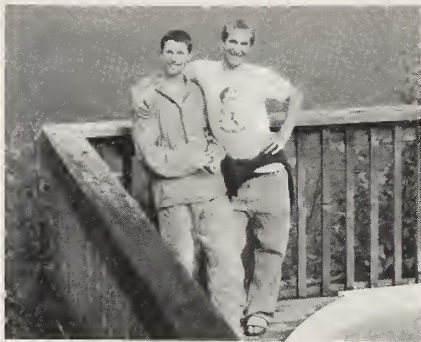

- 1) The leftover food from the parties Mrs. Burkmar likes to have every odd Saturday.
- 2) Hot tub after prep always relaxed me after a long day at school.
- 3) Very few inspections.
- 4) I musn't forget watching TV late Saturday night - with the Burkmars permission, of course!

The year has gone by in the wink of an eye. I will miss living with the Burkmars and the freedom they gave us. It will be a big change moving into the big house. May the Burkmars have many more years of happiness with the new students.

TERRY FOX RUN

The first weekend back to school, we all came together to run, walk and bike in memory of Terry Fox. Only days after the tragic deaths of Princess Diana and Mother Theresa, we set out with more purpose than ever before. Our celebration of life and the human spirit, dedicated to cancer research, was supported by the tremendous enthusiasm expressed by the community.

S.A.C OUTING

The SAC a small group of only 18, provided the school throughout the year with fun excitement and a chance to break away from the usual Saturday night routine. This group was inspirational in their spirit, hard work, and dedication. They put much energy into planning, making ready and hosting, unforgettable occasions for Brentwood to enjoy. The SAC provided opportunities for the whole school to come together, outside the classroom and enjoy good times. Dances, Java Hut, Jeans Day, Bonfires on the Beach and another very successful Charity Work Day are all events aimed at bring the social side of Brentwood alive. The SAC could not have done without the unfailing support and dedication of their teacher coordinator, Mr. Johnston, whose energy and encouragement kept us all going. It was both a pleasure and an honor to have worked with such a great group of people this year, it really was a fantastic year. Best of luck to you all next year!

This year Oceanography 11 went on two exciting field trips in the third term. The first was in late April on a beautiful day to Sidney Spit. It was awesome and we learned a lot about coastal processes. The second trip, where only 15 students attended, was to Botanical Beach in Port Renfrew. It was just spectacular. Overall we all learned a lot about the oceans and its surroundings. Thank you Mr. Purdon for a great year. You are a great teacher and person. Good luck in your future endeavors! We'll miss you!

25TH ANNIVERSARY OF GIRLS

CELEBRATION DINNER

Tonight, I am very proud to follow Tammy, the first female head of school, and honoured to represent the present girls at Brentwood. At the beginning of the year, I am sure that none of us in the graduating class realized that we would be leaving at the end of the year which celebrated the 25^m anniversary of girls. Somehow I think that makes we 39 graduates rather special.

For those in grades 8 –11, all of whom have more time to come at Brentwood, they must now realize after this wonderful, celebratory dinner and seeing and hearing the "first girls" and the "old girls" that they are following in a fine tradition and continuing to make "herstory" at Brentwood.

This has been an inspiring evening for all of us. As I thank our predecessors for being here tonight I look forward to a date somewhere in the future... perhaps in twenty five years when many of us will be returning to celebrate 50 years of girls at Brentwood.

INTERVARSITY CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP

The opportunity to leave the campus on a Tuesday evening, to sit around the fireside and to discuss non-academic matters is afforded to a faithful group who attend regularly in a Mill Bay home. There is genuine interest in discussions ranging from the 'meaning of life' to 'was Jesus who he said he was'. The conversations are frank and personal. The aim is to give the students confidence to practise their faith and develop their knowledge of spiritual matters.

We were entertained and inspired by the Capernwray group who came down from Thetis Island. These adolescents have chosen to take a year of Bible study and relate their experiences in a very meaningful way. A former graduate of the I.V. group, David Ullstrom visited from his missionary work in Taiwan but unfortunately his schedule did not fit in with our meeting night.

In addition to our discussion group, we watched "The Mission" and "Contact" on video. These two movies stimulated lively discussion on the role of the church overseas and the possibility of other life forms in our universe.

We concluded our year, as always, with an outdoor barbecue in June. Jonathon and Andrea Leopold provided excellent music and an inspirational talk to our appreciative group. Best wishes to our graduates. Walk in faith. Be strong in the Lord.

INTERVIEW

When I first showed my Acting 12 class the script of Jean Claude Van Itallie's weird and wonderful play, they reacted with a mixture of enthusiasm and puzzlement. Three months later our audiences reacted in exactly the same way. Interview plays with the mind while drawing laughs and intriguing the senses.

The cast, after varying in their initial response to the play, became uniform in one very important sense. To a man and woman, they gave one hundred percent, allowing me to shape and fashion complex pictures that resolved, dissolved and blended in an instant, while creating a myriad of characters, and weaving the ideas that carried the main theme of urban isolation. On performance nights, the playing looked smooth and simple—a result of intense focussed rehearsal, and commitment to supporting each other and performing the text as colourfully and energetically as possible.

The discussion period that followed each performance allowed the audience to derive insight into the play and voice opinion. Especially on opening night, this proved to be a fun and lively 'performance'; of its own. Again the cast's willingness to throw themselves wholeheartedly into the spirit of the event proved the key ingredient.

So, once again, I learned that 'ask and ye shall receive' is not a cliché but a 'truth'—at least, it is if you work with the right people.

Thanks, Company!

I WILL REMEMBER...

So many memories. So many hours gone. The months of hard work, laughter, stress and frustration. The weeks of anticipation and anxiety. The five days of victory, flowers, hugs and teamwork.

The feelings haunt me, especially Rebecca's arm around my shoulders while we sang the last number with the cast. The candy that 'Props' slipped into our fruit bowls on the last night. The sweet sounds of the songs from backstage. The feeling of triumph after every line, every scene, every show. Maybe the best was the feeling of belonging. - Katrina Baker

The 1st XV, coached by Mr. Medina and Mr. Linn, opened their season with a tough battle against Napier Boys' High School from New Zealand. Although Brentwood was able to contain them for the most part in the first half the visitors from "down under", having just completed their season, proved too fit and too strong and pulled away in the second half to win handily. Many lessons were learnt and the team went on, injury ridden, to split the games in the ISA competition with two comfortable wins against St Georges' School but losing to a much stronger Shawnigan side on both outings.

Congratulations go to Tyler Wish, the 1st XV captain, who was selected to tour Scotland with the Canadian U17 team. Vice captain, John Ouellet, was on the U17 long list however an injury sustained during the final trials marred his selection chances.

This fall rugby season, shortened by the restrictive rules of BC School Sports, was nevertheless one in which the team can feel a sense of satisfaction. A record of 1-3 masked a period of commendable growth and development.

The senior rugby group of some 50-odd athletes, odd being the operative word!, trained as a whole and separated into team units just prior to games. There was the usual mixture of experienced players and "rookies," but they all worked with a will to improve both fitness and skills. The tone of the group was set very well by the grade 12s of last year's team.

In competitive terms the 2nd XV lacked size, particularly in the forwards, but they played with great determination and a steadily increasing confidence and team spirit. The season opened with a 0-7 loss at St. George's in a game we could have won with a little more cohesion and luck. The two Shawnigan games were very physical losses, in which we played superb defense against superior size and pace at almost every position. The return against St. George's was a decisive 44-3 win as the forwards dominated the going and the backs moved the ball wide in a most attractive fashion.

I should like to thank Tyler Bryant, Rob Brandt, Will Duguid and Paul Kenway for their example and leadership on the field. Many of the grade 11's came along well in their first season of senior rugby. Owen Madrick became a confident and aggressive line-out forward while Chuck Ravenhill, Rob Whitehead, and Allan Jackman developed into quick and effective back-row forwards. At centre, James Wood and Mike Persson tackled superbly, and handled well enough to create tries for the various wing/full-back combinations that played outside them.

It was a great pleasure for me to coach this fine group of young men and I hope that many of them will form part of the spring rugby teams that will compete in the public schools leagues in the third term.

The Lion is to the jungle as the Brentwood 3rd XV is to the rugby field. We were tough with a capital 'T'! We ran circles round our dizzied opponents and rightfully finished our season undefeated. Our team spirit shattered our opponents' hopes of victory and led us to glory. Master Mick Moylen trained us to be dominators of the field, and that we were. We were envied by every team in the school and had the best season of all of them. We were kings of our jungle. I hope you enjoyed it as much as I did.

1ST XV RUGBY TOUR

To feed the forwards' cravings for oats and inside-out sheep, the First XV decided this year to tour Scotland. Mr. Linn already on cloud nine as he dreamed of his rolling highlands, decided also that France would be a wonderful spot to warm up and so it was. Shortly before spring break, we packed our bags with French/English dictionaries and manly dresses ("Kilts!" Mr. Linn insists. "They're called Kilts!"), and headed for the Old World and the best two weeks of our year.

The first spot we hit was St. Foy, in southern France. Basing ourselves out of Mr. Linn's old club, we found our billets (the were the ones screaming "Hein! Ici!") and braced ourselves for the strongest onslaught of real culture we have yet known.

Fitting in was, at first, difficult. We brought a native French-speaker in John, but having a French prop translate is like asking a French poodle to show us around. Fortunately, Andy also spoke French fairly well, and some of the talk from my Montreal birthplace came back to me, so with three semi-skilled translators, we did alright.

Of course, we tried to teach the French English as well. Fly-half Scotty had a lot of fun with this, though the young girl he spoke to didn't much take to it (probably something he said). In time, we figured out that all you needed was to point at whatever you wanted and say, "un autre". From then on, things moved surprisingly well.

The first game we played was in fact a tournament, involving the St. Foy junior club (aged 17-19) and their rivals Castillon. We defeated the latter 35-12, thanks largely to the massive Scottish GAP student, Donny, who scored three tries; he was equally instrumental in our 17-12 victory over St. Foy in the final. Shortly afterward, we thanked our vanquished hosts and departed for Bordeaux.

Holing up eight per room in a youth hostel (the cleaning women referred to it using the French word for "brothel"), we prepared for a big match against the Bordeaux University Club (le BEC). The night before the game, Captain Tyler delivered an energetic, hand-slapping speech and we carried that energy right onto the pitch. Playing much of our second line against forwards so old that their sons played in the backs, we amassed 56 points to le BEC's 5. Full of our own success, we flew to Paris for a two-day stopover.

Ah, la belle Paris. Unfortunately, I was sick for most of it, and my cultural experience was limited to the bidet in my peripheral vision, but I heard the stories. Whole bathtubs of fun were had in our hotel, while a group of Brentonians enjoyed the most interesting establishment after JY used the wrong French word in asking a cab driver to find him a "fancy place". Wonderful, gay Paris. Could life be any better?

But it was! For we had not yet hit Edinburgh, the sight of our hardest matches and many of our longest nights. (The back row insisted on staying up to read, you see, and the lights kept us up.) We eked out a close victory against George Watson School, 27-22, and took part in two sevens tournaments. We placed an admirable fourth in one of them despite never having trained for it, and were especially pleased that Shawnigan, on a simultaneous tour of their own, came last.

For the next few days, we checked out the "Scottish scene". We saw Scotland's national team play England (they lost dammit, but at least we were there), while Mark Rybchuk ventured to try haggis. For those of you who don't know, haggis is a traditional Scottish dish manufactured like so: take one sheep, sheer, flip it inside out, gather its guts, place it inside its own stomach, add oats, wrap it up in its intestinal lining, deep fry, plug nose, eat. Highly efficient, but not as delectable as Mr. Linn would have us believe. He pops them like Prozac on a bad day.

As you may have noticed, we were by this time undefeated, but our last match was shaping up to be the toughest one. Not only were we playing Edinburgh Academy, Scotland's strongest school side, but we couldn't have Donny play with us as Edinburgh is his alma mater. There was an upside, though: their firsts were off playing in the Scotland finals, so we would only have to play the second-best players of the best team in Scotland. Still a big deal - this wasn't just a match, this was Brentwood, BC and Canada's pride at stake. Charging on and expecting the worst, we went in with everything we had...

And showed them where to stuff their sheep. We won 48-0.

The senior rugby squad was involved in two separate competitions during the third term. The first involved the North Vancouver Island AAA schools in a league which leads to berths in the Provincial Championships. The second saw Brentwood entered in a premier exhibition league competing against teams from the Island, Vancouver and the Fraser Valley.

The season opened with a senior squad playing John Paul College from Queensland, Australia. This team was a young development squad that forced us to work hard for the 12-12 draw. Later we played Strathcona-Tweedsmuir from Calgary, Alberta. Our second squad managed a 25-15 victory on the first outing and, when enhanced with a number of 1st team players, ran away with a 56-5 win in the second.

Our entry into the premier exhibition series B pool produced wins over Elgin Park (49-7), Terry Fox (55-5), Ladysmith (86-0) and Lord Tweedsmuir (42-7). These results put us in first place and secured a berth in the A pool for next year.

Hot off a successful overseas tour, the 1st XV prepared to take the field against their perennial rivals, Shawnigan, in early April. Asleep, it appeared, for the first five minutes, the team found themselves down 12-0. They managed to fight back, however the lesson "too little, too late" was learned. The margin was 12 in a 26-14 loss. A convincing win over Spectrum of Victoria, however, gained the team a berth in the Provincials as the ninth seed.

After dispatching the eighth-seeded Lord Byng 25-0 in the opening match, all eyes were on the next fixture against the number one seed, Oak Bay. The team managed to lift its game one more notch and sent the favourites into the consolation round with a 28-15 win. This win placed BCS into the semi-finals against Carson Graham. The team was asked to raise its game yet again and once more they were able to dig deep and produce a 29-24 win against tremendous odds - one of which was fatigue.

The stage was now set for an all Island, all independent school final against Shawnigan. The team took to the field with tremendous support from Brentwood students, family, alumnae and friends, and played their hearts out. Unfortunately, the week had taken its toll and the tired, battered bodies that took to the field went down 22-15 in a well-fought battle.

I would like to thank my fellow coaches Mr. Linn, Mr. Burrows, Mr. Cowie and Mr. McFadyen, for without their efforts this season's successes would not have been possible.

This year the 'grim reaper', as he is known to his fellow coaches, brought in a bumper crop of raw, athletic talent which needed to be carefully blended with the more seasoned elements of last year's Junior Colts. Expectations were high, and as I constantly had to remind myself, this was a normal-sized group of players who would be faced with equal weight and size in most of their games and who would need to outplay their opponents to win.

Our first two exhibition games against our own 3rds and Cowichan High, though they resulted in wins, each cost us an important player; Mike Woodward for the whole season with a knee injury and Mike Lewis with a separated shoulder. The fluidity we had hoped for in the backline was elusive all season and we missed these players as much as they missed the opportunity to play. After a solid exhibition win at Shawnigan, we entered the I.S.A. league proper against St. George's. We made a strong start but pressure that failed to yield points, followed by typical Saint's opportunism, left us on the wrong side of a 23-17 scoreline. Later in the season we avenged the defeat in a squeaker, 23-22 at home. The result was all the sweeter as this St. George's side had gone undefeated all season and, as a great rugby sage Ivor Ford, a longtime Colt's coach would always say, it is the result after mid-term that counts. In three games against SMU we won two, including the final one to gain a semi-final place in the Island Competition. Against Shawnigan we won three, including the last game of the season in the play-off for 3rd and 4th. In a rousing game, the side played with tremendous spirit and scored 7 excellent tries in a second-half display of open, running rugby. The first half was where it was won; however, in a piece of a defensive play we denied them the score, despite being under tremendous pressure just before the half-time whistle.

My thanks go to Mr. Griffiths for his work throughout the season, particularly with the forwards, and to Porter who did an excellent job as Captain. The team was a pleasure to work with, a great bunch of characters; Cam with his animal impersonations and Jamie with his Buster Keaton impressions. I hope they enjoyed the season as much as I did and I wish them all well in their future rugby careers.

The B team started off the season as a cluster of people left over after the A team had taken its picks. Fitness levels were soon heightened by means of huge group practices with Mr. McCarthy. Training reached a nice plateau when coach Griffiths took over - he wisely saw no point to overdoing strenuous exercise. With his help, our boys were learning fast, as many of them were new to the sport. The first game was meant to be a reference point from which to guide the rest of the season. It ended up being an extremely close contest with Shawnigan; the result a one-try difference in their favour. Our season and its success could be drawn out as a perfect upward curve, that game making an incredible starting point. Next was the big St. George's trip - travelling must have made us tired because we gave up three fluky tries, only to answer with one of our own. That loss, however, set up a grudge that would carry us through to the end of the season. The B team's season was marked by an alternate purpose - we gave the A's a hand with our best players when they needed to win. This was actually to help us, as talents were uncovered and lessons learned in the fast-paced league above. Our team was forming quite nicely and gaining confidence, when we came across Dover Bay. As they weren't sure of their own abilities, we were their 'reference point'. Our side magically changed into a comfortable blend of A's and B's as the game progressed. It was a much needed reality check. The last game of the season for the B team was against St. George's. We pulled together all of the hard work put in throughout the term and chalked up a huge victory. The B team was a great success.

The grade 10 Colt C Rugby team greatly enjoyed a fun, successful season and gained a good deal of playing experience against many different teams of widely varying skill levels. Many of the players on the Colt C's team had very little or no playing experience, and that they have learned this much so fast shows great potential. The Colts displayed an excellent attitude towards this season of rugby, and they met this term's challenge with great success. Not only did they finish the first season with a winning record, but they also demonstrated an eagerness to learn and much improvement in the areas of fitness and proficiency. Essential to the C's success was the student leadership provided both by the captain, David Tso, and by Allan Parsons, both wonderful rugby players. I would like to extend my sincere thanks and congratulations to all the individuals who played on the Colt C's this year and contributed to this team's success.

In measuring the success of this Jr. Colt side, it is more a function of what they developed from as opposed to the actual results themselves. Virtually all the established players on the team were backs. Consequently, from the outset we looked effective whenever we could win the ball. Up front, however, we were virtually starting from scratch.

From the first game to the last of the season, Elliott Peacock was a source of inspiration to the pack that he was leading. James Deck's season was plagued by injuries and so without him, we were effectively establishing a front five from new players. This obviously took some time, but by October Marc Bungarten and Micha Dordevich had established the necessary skills in the front row and Charlie Ambrose was beginning to win consistent line out ball. The loose trio was also beginning to gel and John Weedon became a significant factor in second phase play.

Malcolm Walter developed into a very effective scrum half and Derek Gosling's sound decision-making as captain and fly half was a major factor in the success of this side. Peter Hackett, Nick Gatzionis and Frank Glassen all developed into very penetrating runners, and with Robert Weedon's elusive style on the wing, we always looked dangerous when our back line was given some space.

The highlight of the season for me, was in the week where we won the Mid-Island Championships, defeating Shawnigan for the third time this season and the final game against St. George's. While we lost this final encounter, the combination of support play and defense was superb. The team demonstrated considerable maturity in their play towards the end of the season.

The Colt B squad also developed into a very effective unit and many of the players were called on to play for the A team on various occasions. David Small, Kris Baker, Damian Kayra, Tom Philippson, Justin Woodward and Matt Baker showed great promise and all played for the A side at various times during the season.

I greatly enjoyed the opportunity to work with these young players and if this squad can stay together, as I suspect they will, then Brentwood will have a most impressive 1st XV in three years time. My co-coach, Donny McFadyen and I want to thank the boys for their hard work and commitment.

This year we had more Mice, but they were less experienced than the rodents on opposing teams. Once we had overcome their natural instincts to scurry away from trouble and instead began to maraud as a pack, they became more frightening to our opponents than they were to each other or their coaches. A win at Ladysmith against a bunch of huge but disorganized predators was the turning point. Soon, led by captain and pack leader Austin Woodward (our number eight) and speedy runners Connor McKenna and Graham Haigh, we were running holes through the opposition as if they were (need I say it) Edam or Gouda. Two darker mice from southern climes (our Mexican connection) Pablo Sanchez (fly half) and Fernando do Ovando (wing) also showed their deftness at evading the traps of our enemies. Perhaps the most tenacious member of the pack was Brent Szerze (flanker). He was adept at gnawing away at the ankles of attackers but unfortunately was wounded in action and spent some time on the sideline with an injured claw.

The highlight of the season was the second St. Georges game. After they had massacred us by over forty points over there, we came back to pounce on them at home, only losing by a couple of points on a last second try. This showed how far the team had advanced. To set within a few points of a much larger team with more eights to choose from and two years experience at rugby was truly remarkable. Mr. Henry and I are very proud of the heroic efforts of this horde of mice.

The heady days of glory on the hockey field in the early 1990's are still remembered at Brentwood by the coach and anyone prepared to listen to him! In 1997 we were not able to produce the same results as four or five years earlier, but the team effort and commitment were just as strong. As a coach I often remind myself that playing 40 games in a nine-week season is brutal, made even tougher when the opposition is powerful and the field conditions are less than ideal. The physical output demanded of the girls was greater in 1997 than ever before because of the monsoon-like weather we experienced in September and October and because of the deterioration of grounds maintenance on many of the fields we play on. The only grass fields we visited that were really conducive to good field hockey were in the Okanagan Valley at Penticton. The art of preparing good playing surfaces with the use of roller and mower is rare on the West Coast.

Carey Livingstone (captain) led a spirited and determined team, which toiled hard and complained little. I well remember Carey and Lindsey MacLean taking some nasty injuries at Port Alberni early in the season but continuing to play as though nothing had happened. Carey refused to go to hospital for stitches until the game was over. Nicky Gosling (co-vice captain), a stalwart defender who also had her share of knocks and bruises, and Rebecca Whitney (co-vice Captain), the longest serving First Eleven player, supported and contributed to Carey's leadership.

While we remember two heavy losses to Cowichan (provincial champions), we also remember beating S.M.U., Oak Bay, Handsworth, Frances Kelsey and Centennial, names of some of the better teams in B.C. We recognized the frustration of playing well but not being able to score regularly or at key times. Too often we would dominate a game but tie 0-0 or lose 1-0. We competed in all the prestigious tournaments such as the Bridgman, the I.S.A. and the "AAA" Island Tournament as well as playing our 10 North Island league fixtures. The highlight of our season was achieving third place in the Island Tournament behind Cowichan and Mt. Doug to earn a berth at the B.C. Provincial tournament. This was Brentwood's sixteenth appearance in eighteen years at the provincials, a record only equalled by Oak Bay. On this occasion we only managed to win two of our six games.

Carey, Lindsay, Nicky, Rebecca along with Katie Mills, Rhiannon Foster (goalkeeper) and Erin Valentine have come to the end of their Brentwood career, having given superb service and loyalty to the sport for several years.

The future of the 1st XI appears fairly bright with several first team players returning: Lauren Brown, Harriet Mills, Chelsea Hooper, Colleen Rezac, Sarah Mitchell, Rebecca Kinkead and Lizanne Tolmie. A promising crop of Junior XI players are also coming up to the senior ranks.

Other players who made occasional appearances in the 1997 first team were Chrissy Lavdovsky, Elizabeth Anton, Nadia Wechselberger, and Lucy Brown. Unfortunate circumstance prevented them all playing more regularly.

Our season was brought to a conclusion in late November with a competitive house tournament that saw Whittall squeak past Rogers in the final.

Second Eleven Field Hockey

The Second Eleven began their season with a bang. They defeated the First Eleven in a shoot-out in the Independent Schools Tournament, only to be defeated in the final by a strong Collingwood XI by a single goal. As the season progressed, they maintained a high standard of play and developed a strong esprit de corps. Their season climaxed in Vancouver at Hugo Ray Park, when they tied two goals each with a first division women's team called the Vipers. Among the individuals in this team were: Chrissy Lavdovsky, an impressive dribbler, Petra Juzwishin, the ultimate roamer, Liz Anton, an impressive winger and Ashley Hobson, who was a most reliable goal tender. Congratulations girls, on a very enjoyable and successful season.

Third Eleven Field Hockey

It speaks volumes for the depth of our hockey programme that we were able to field a competitive team made up of a few veterans and several novices. This was a training ground for future stars. They played many games in the Duncan league and survived two tournaments. Among those who showed the greatest improvement and future potential were Adrienne Buckingham, Danielle Trueman and Christina Leonard. I greatly enjoyed working with this group as they displayed great enthusiasm and loyalty throughout the season.

This team had grace provided by Rachel Kerswell. It had bread provided by Katrina Baker. It had noise provided by Joanne Saunders. It had valuable stones provided by Crystal Chen. It had flowers provided by Rosie Brown. All it lacked were a solid defense and effective goal scorers.

This team worked hard, considering the majority were complete beginners, and made some good progress. They participated in the local Cowichan Valley Midget League, a fiercely competitive league, considering the quality of field hockey in the area. As the season drew to a close they also took part in a tournament in Port Alberni and finally the local Midget Tournament, held to signal the close of the season.

I hope the girls enjoyed their first experiences of Field Hockey. They will hopefully enjoy more success in the years to come.

Fiona Linn

We started off to a great year of field hockey, and it just got better and better. We won most of our games, and only lost by a goal or so in the games in which we were not so strong. The 14 players and 1 manager (Kate Burkmar, who we all could not have done without), all came together and produced a fabulous team with great spirit and the will to win. On the back line there was Aggie, Gill, Amy and Sarah who held us in there at those 1-1 games every now and then. Our strategic midfields, Catherine, Alice, Nathalie, and Kharytia made it possible for us to get a chance at net; while the strong forward line consisting of Victoria, Louise (who was our only grade 8 on the team), Tara, Emily and Andrea all brought us to our chance at the Mid-Islands at Kelsey. After many hard games and practices, we ended up playing our hardest and proved to be our best when going into shoot-outs and winning by the very last goal, which is what won us the Mid-Islands. We were then sent off to the Islands which were held at Brentwood; unfortunately, not having a very good day, we played hard, but did not do as well as we all had expected. We ended up ninth over all, which was gratifying, and something with which to be pleased. Throughout the term, Tara Medina scored the most goals, with Louise Hackett and Victoria Pickles close behind. The team played great, it was a wicked year, and I thank all of the girls, Mrs. Ferreira, Mr. Martin and everyone for their support.

The spring term was once the time for Brentwood boys alone to play field hockey, and for some years we produced two senior teams and a junior team. However, changes have occurred inside and outside the school which have led to a different structure for the sport. The emphasis is more on junior players and the inclusion of many girls. The competitive games for juniors, girls and mixed teams are plentiful in the Cowichan Valley, where literally hundreds of players are involved.

Boys field hockey at Shawnigan has vanished, and in Victoria it has not yet evolved in the way it promised to ten years ago. Consequently, our first eleven boys team looked to Chemainus and Cowichan high schools and to St. George's in Vancouver for competition. We went unbeaten at this level this season, tying both games 1-1 against St. George's.

The Cowichan Valley is experiencing tremendous growth in spring field hockey, therefore we have been able to schedule more than one game every week for our junior teams. Most of our junior boys were new to the game (the exception was Tom Philippson), but they learned fast. Most are natural athletes and did not appear inexperienced after the first month. Connor McKenna, Drayton Salkeld, and John and Robert Weedon were particularly skillful; Steve Peirce learned how to score; Nick Maytom and Mike Pollard made great strides and will certainly be effective defenders next year. Derek Gosling and Peter Hackett made some late season appearances and played some outstanding games.

For the eighteen or so junior girls, the match practice will bring rewards in September. Among the grade 8 players particularly is the embryo of a powerful junior XI in 1998 and 1st XI in 2000. No one exemplifies this promise more than Louise Hackett. The game results varied, but so did the team selection. Our aim was to involve everyone and for each girl to add to her experience. On several occasions the teams on the field were a mix of boys and girls. Many valuable lessons were learned by both sexes in mixed field hockey.

It would be remiss not to mention the long and invaluable service given to the sport at Brentwood by Lee Ferreira. He has been a part of the 1st XI for four years and is one of the better players in the province. Excellent contributions have also come from Richard Grimes, Will Duguid, Rory Wood, Eric Bensted, Al Bradley and Aaron Vallejo. They formed the nucleus of a strong boys 1st XI, and will be difficult to replace in the immediate future. Most, I am sure, will continue to play the game in the days beyond Brentwood and I wish them every success.

Night out with the girls

"YES WE CAN!" Long before Nike took on the positive thinking slogan the Senior Girls' Volleyball Team adopted it. This season the mental aspect of the game took center stage with positive thinking and powers of concentration as all-important. Lydia Kingsbury, this year's Captain along with her two assistants, Jennifer Makinen and Alana Silverman, surrounded the Sports Complex with posters of the "Believe in Yourself" motto. The team's goal from the beginning of the year was to be one of the top three teams on Vancouver Island at the AA level and to go on to the Provincial Championship. Aware that this task would take a great deal of hard work and commitment, everyone was up for the challenge.

The season featured the usual tournaments. One of the highlights was trouncing Shawnigan at the ISA Champs in the round robin in two straight games. That would be our only victory against the Shawnigan side for the year. There were some spectacular and close games both at Shawnigan and at Brentwood, but SLS seemed to eke out the victories. At the ISA champs, we ended up in third place behind Shawnigan and York House. The always tough UBC Tournament was a performance that many would have been happy to forget. Friday's matches were less than close although Saturday came with a few convincing victories. The Western Canadian Independent Schools Champs were at St. Boniface Diocesan School in Winnipeg. As usual, the hospitality was great although the roofs and stairwells at some of the houses were a little low for our lanky and tall middles. The first day of the tournament was disappointing, but the second two days showed much better results. We finished in sixth place, just missing the playoffs.

Next, we went to the North Islands, the first stop on the road to our goal. We had a great tournament losing only to a very strong Powell River team and to Parksville in a close match. All wearing the number 10 on our left sleeve as a reminder of absent teammate Joelle Plomb, we finished proudly in third place earning our way to the Islands, even though we had a free berth as the host school. The cannonading hits of Veronika Voracek led the way as well as tremendous blocking from Jodie Norris and Jen Makinen. Needless to say all the hitting came from the usual stalwart setting of Lydia Kingsbury.

The Islands were the last step to our goal. Quickly, Brentwood established itself as one of the stronger teams at the tournament, beating Reynolds and Gulf Islands handily, behind superb defense from Alana Silverman and Megan Boyar. One of our biggest strengths through the year was consistency and focus, especially from the bench. Rather than always a starting six and a bench squad, we had a rotation of players playing. Meaghan Moore became a consistent threat at middle, as did Hannah McDonald at both power and rightside. Megan Boyar and Joelle both showed tremendous ability at rightside. In the fight for third place, Brentwood met Lambrick Park, a perennial powerhouse, and, in two games, easily clobbered them. With the third place finish we had achieved our goal of earning a spot to the Provincials in Powell River.

The Provincials became almost anticlimactic for some. However, we had some great matches, even knocking off the third ranked team. In the end we placed 15th in the Province, a result of which we were all very proud. We learned many lessons throughout the year. Most of all we learned to believe in ourselves and that if you want to accomplish something then your mindset is all-important. But from Joelle we learned to smile and laugh and enjoy what you do everyday, no matter what life throws at you. And that we did. We all loved, played, watched and experienced volleyball like we never had before from the patience and perseverance of Bryony Baker and Louise Pickles, to the determination and grit of Megan Boyar, Meaghan Moore and Hannah McDonald, to the upbeat attitude of Lisa Townsend, to the leadership of the captaining triumvirate, to the sense of humour of Veronika Voracek and Jodie Norris and to the tenacity and drive of Joelle Plomb. Siobhan Gilroy, we thank you for your tremendous work as Statistician (etc!) this season. We came, we saw, we conquered ... mostly because we believed and ... we can! What a terrific season! —Coach Khanna

Below: The lean, mean fighting team

The beginning of the season
We started out so strong
With our brand new middle,
The vivacious Terrah Jong.

Other teams were scared
When they saw our ten-foot wall.
With Steph in the middle,
We knew she'd block them all.

Tiny, short, and hyper
Moe keeps us all in line.
We know she'll keep things organized
And her setting's oh so fine.

Up on the starting line,
She's power all the way-
Even when her timing's off,
Keavy makes the play.

With her gorgeous curly locks
And her consistency of play-
Sarah, when you grow a foot
The front row is where you'll stay.

She started out on the B's,
But farther she would go,
Our corky little setter
We all know who she is... she's Falco!!

When she started she was shaking
And we saw a couple tears,
But now Jenn's back with vengeance
And she's conquered all her fears.

With unique taste in music
And a different style of clothes,
Our little Cosmo is Julie,
A great player, we hope she knows.

We've got Bensted on the offside,
Covering our absent-minded setter-
Keep it coming Amy
'Cause you've gotten so much better.

Even though she isn't here
Our favorite girl is Ty,
She came out to the bus today
Just to say good-bye.

What would this year be Without Georgia on the bench?
Her cheering inspires the male audience

JUNIOR 'B' GIRLS VOLLEYBALL

The junior "B" girls' volleyball season started off as usual- a bunch of uncoordinated girls running away from the ball! This year, however, was unique in that our team evolved from an inexperienced "B" team to a lean, mean, fighting team. We eventually learned to control the ball as we bumped it and, after many hours of practice, serve properly over the net. We got a huge shock when we placed seventh at a junior "A" tournament and an even bigger one when we placed third at the mid-island "B" tournament. The team would like to thank Mr. Johnston for his great coaching and a wonderful volleyball season. We could not have done it without you.

Playing for my first year on the senior basketball team for the 97/98 season was exhilarating. The talent, co-operation, and heart that we showed led us to an impressive level of play. Though practice was tough, we were drilled to become one of the most sophisticated and organized squads in our league, and it shined during game time.

Before our Mid-Island tournament began, we practiced during our season and in exhibition tournaments and games. Our two platoons were led by Rob Nugent, who led the team in blocks and had most of our points and rebounds, and Robin Wu, our captain who was a true leader and inspiration with his amazing play. Atsushi Hoshi was a master at defense proving to the team that 'heart' is the key to success. Clifton Murray, the dunking king, had countless steals and packed it home, running our score up the board and giving us the confidence we needed. Max Keith-King easily had the best shot on the team and was probably the most diligent, calm, and organized player out there. Malcolm Baker was also an asset to our team, being aggressive underneath the boards and quick with his swift shots and put backs.

Our Grade 11's should also not be left out. Michael Hermesen and Minoru Hoshi were hard working players who scored their share of points and proved that they were up to the challenge of senior ball. Our three forwards, Jared Barbour, Owen Madrick, and Brian Wells, were strong posts who quickly adapted to the level of intensity that was required in game time,

Over the course of the season, we played in some competitive and difficult tournaments. In the Cougar Classic we placed second, repeating last years performance (Robin being the MVP of our team). Another crisp performance was displayed in the latter part of the year when we played at Highlands and placed a well deserved third disregarding the fact that we were plagued with injuries. In our own tournament, the "Countdown to Playoffs", we played with heart and fought with immense ambition, but still only placed sixth(out of 12). Finally, we came to the Mid-Islands. We played extremely well in our first two games, and fought valiantly, but the game that counted we ended losing and therefore ending our hard battled season...

Rob goes for the glory

Robin blasts down the court

...To Mr. Johnston we would like thank you for your time, effort, and patience. To the Grade 12's, especially our captain Robin Wu, the Grade 11's, Mr. Johnston, and I give our thanks for your leadership, vigorous play, and the lasting impression you left on all of us. Grade 11's, you played extremely well, proving that we can flourish as well as this years team did and shape our squad for the 98/99 season. A final mention should go to Philipp Postrehovsky for his dedicated contribution to our team. He had the job to film our games, take stats and check them, get our water, and eventually make a movie of our season. Through all of our teams hard work we had a successful season, one to hold our heads up high and be proud of our accomplishments.

As a coach, you choose a philosophy you believe in and you try to convince your players to embrace this thought process. I believe having FUN is the #1 priority of a high school sports program. Secondly, playing the game at the highest level possible by your students is an important goal. Finally, respect for your fellow teammates, your opposition and ultimately the game itself must be kept in the forefront. NOW, to stick with this philosophy when "success" is often measured by wins and losses is not easy. BUT, that is why this season and this team were so special.

We started out practising in October with 7 new faces on our team of 11. (Three fresh and enthusiastic characters came from the grade 10 level, namely Terrah Jong, Jacquie Connor and Stephanie Sloan.) Led by the veteran, Carey Livingstone (captain), our spiritual leader on and off the court, she demonstrated how HEART was going to take us to new heights this season. We quickly noticed that our athletic leader, Lauren Brown, was making her rookie presence known by scoring more fast-break lay-ups than Robin Wu and Clifton Murray combined.

After a slow start prior to Christmas, the girls began to believe in themselves and the system we had adopted and the victories and smiles started to pile up. Our league record of 8 wins and 3 losses included some gutsy performances by Kim Bernard (22 pts vs Lake Cowichan), Veronika Voracek (16 pts vs Gulf Islands), Carey Livingstone (21 pts vs Shawnigan (isa's)) and Jodie Norris (15 pts vs Chemainus).

The TEAM aspect of our game was exemplified by the veteran Brooke Raphael, who accepted the key role of defensive stopper, with her usual response "sure coach". Using her boundless energy, Brooke frustrated opponents with an "in your face" style of defense. Also, Lisa Tsui (2 year veteran) and Kimiko Hata were extremely patient and filled in whenever called upon.

In February, we were off to the Island 'AA' Championships in Ladysmith. We went into the 12 team tournament ranked 7th and we were ready to have some fun and play some good sound basketball. The girls quickly made their presence felt by beating Kwalikum by 14 points. Then, the game of the season took place. We were up against the #2 seed Woodlands and the floor turned into a battle field. I still remember talking to the girls between the 3rd and 4th quarters (W-45, B-42) and telling them that this was a fight to see who wanted to win the most. It was physical, tough, grind-it-out basketball. FOCUS was the name of the game. I have never stood so tall as I did that quarter as 'my girls' outscored Woodlands 29 to 16 to triumph 71 to 61. At that point the stage was set. Earlier in the season we had lost to Frances Kelsey by 10. Now, only Kelsey (#3) stood between us and a chance to go to the Provincial Championships. We reversed the tables (led by Lauren, 25 pts) and beat them by 10 hard-fought points. YES! We were off to the 'AA' Provincial Championships for only the 2nd time in Brentwood history! The squad battled admirably against Ladysmith (#1 seed in the tournament, and #6 seed in the province) in the final only to lose by 12 points, 56-44.

Provincial Championships! Book vans, flights, hotels and more importantly, make up a new 'travelling' tape. Off to Kamloops we go and the first voice I hear in the hotel is the legendary Doug Harshbarger, coach of the reigning Prov. Champ. Nechako Valley Viqueens of Vanderhoof. He is the author of the monthly Sr. Girls Basketball "Roundup" (I got to know him through his editorials) and a 41-year veteran who was retiring at the end of this tournament. His philosophy was also mine and meeting him was an honour and a positive omen. We met in the first round, Nechako(#1) vs Brentwood(#16) and they showed us some great moves on the court but their best move was winning (87-50) with style and grace. While shaking coach Harshbarger's hand at the end of the game, the first thing he said was "you guys can really play ball, you outscored us 21 to 15 in the 2nd quarter, hold your heads high." Our girls learned a lot in that match. Next, we probably played our best technical basketball of the season. Up against the Agassiz Eagles(#8), Lauren poured in 31 points and we lost by a close 10. We then knew that we 'belonged' at this tournament. Our 3rd round game was a tough psychological test. The local favourites, Brocklehurst Broncos (#12) and their 400 fans put us through the wringer, 68-41. However, Jacquie and Terrah held their own at the end of this game, giving this coach reason to smile for the future. Three days, three tough games and now Prince Rupert(#14) for the chance to finish above our ranking. The girls did their usual 'tease Mr. Henry' routine in the first quarter by spotting the opposition 6 points. Then, their pride kicked in and the rebounding rookie machine (Stephanie Sloan, 22 pts) took over. The Brentwood Black Hawks had won (68-55) their first game at the 'AA' provincial level in over 10 years. Eighty-seven teams had begun the season in late November and we had finished 15th.

BOY, was I a proud coach! We had a BLAST all season AND the province of British Columbia found out who we were and what we stood for. You CAN have fun and still accomplish a great deal. (By the way, the only coach who MIGHT have had more fun than me, Doug H., won the tournament.)

At this time, I'd like to thank Elaine and Gar Brown for their complete support of this team, including their raucous cheering in Kamloops.

Finally, I want the girls to know how much I appreciate THEM. I enjoy working with them on the court and just being around 11 fine young women off the court, is a pleasure. I truly believe I have learned more from them than they have from me. I especially want to thank my four grade 12's, Carey, Kim, Brooke and Lisa. It's been two fantastic years and I'll miss you, guaranteed!

Here's looking at the '98-'99 season. Cheers!

"Omigod!... What on earth is she doing to her?", Mr. Ogilvie exclaimed. The team looks out onto the court at the game. We see one of our players in quite an odd position, with a player of the opposing team 'defending' her. During our short but interesting season this year, the junior A team had a great learning experience. In the beginning, we went to the ISAs at Collingwood and won the tournament, with Steph Sloan as our main scorer. The rest of the season was a lot of fun, but you could say, "It's not whether you win or lose, it's how you play the game." We had occasional wins and some tough losses but in the end, we were happy that we played our best. Amy Bensted and Michelle Tarrant were our lead scorers and were backed up by Natalie Langdon-Wilkins with her awesome 3 point shots. We never made it to the Mid-Islands, as it was held over our mid-term break, but on behalf of the whole team, we would like to thank our always encouraging and awesome coach, Mr. Ogilvie, for his coaching during the season.

The grade eight boys kept the streak alive this season, going undefeated in league and playoffs to win the Mid-Island championships for the second straight year. This is a remarkable feat in view of the fact that we compete against many schools with much larger numbers from which to choose.

The character of the team was clearly demonstrated in the Mid-Island Tournament at Mt. Prevost. In the semi-final game against Quamichan, the boys recovered from an incident which involved some intimidation tactics by the opposition, but ended with us on the raw end of the fouls called. Instead of losing their cool, the team responded by rallying from a nine-point deficit. They clawed their way back to tie the game with ten seconds remaining and a timely steal by Pablo Sanchez led to a lay-up for Graham Haigh. That basket put us ahead to stay in a very emotional finish. The lads went on to win the final against the host team 50-45 in a game which featured another comeback, this time out-scoring the opposition 17-8 in the fourth quarter.

I offer my congratulations to a group of players who overcame ethnic diversity and a wide variety of playing styles to work effectively as a unit in critical games. Our 'United Nations' team was made up of players from Taiwan, Hong Kong, Mexico, and the United States, as well as a few token Canadians. The turning point in the season came at the Gorge Bonner Exhibition tournament when we lost heavily to a very powerful team from Victoria. The loss made the boys realize how important it was to play unselfishly and they sorted out their differences in a team meeting called by the two captains, Pablo Sanchez and Frank Chih.

My thanks go to the two captains, Pablo, the playmaker at point guard, and Frank, the defensive catalyst and scorer on the wing. Our other wing, Richard Yu, was the leading scorer and the post position was shared by David Cummins (when not injured), Kevin Chou and Bryce Farrar. All three were fierce competitors who could rebound and score in close. Graham Haigh provided strong defense work at forward and was an inspiration to the rest of the team because of his enthusiasm and toughness. Coming off the bench we had Mark Roehlig, Isaac Chen, Chris Lee and, in the tournament, Austin Woodward. All of these players contributed to the team's success and provided the depth needed in a good team.

Although Brentwood's young squash history will become only one page thicker this spring, it seems as though we've added an entire chapter this year. Not only has squash enjoyed a growing interest among BCS athletes, but the game in general has thrived in the past year, both locally and beyond. For the first time ever, a Canadian (Jonathan Powers), broke into the top ten in the world standings, soaring up to his current # 3 ranking. The Brentwood Squash Club travelled twice to Victoria this year, competing first in the Vancouver Island Squash Championships in October, and second, competing in the Pacific Northwest Squash Championships in February. The results for both tournaments speak for themselves. In October, the BCS team finished up capturing three of the four titles in their division, and placing second in the other. Congratulations to Louis Yang, placing second overall in the Men's Novice main event; Alex Whitehouse, winner of the Men's Novice consolation; Frank Yang, winner of the Novice classic plate; and to Jones Hsu, winner of the Novice second classic plate. In February, the Brentwood team again returned home victorious, this time having captured an even greater number of titles. It should be clear, however, that although success can easily be measured in 'wins', this year was truly successful because of the players themselves and the attitudes they brought to the courts with them. Congratulations to all those who were a part of the Brentwood Squash Club this year, for your outstanding enthusiasm, dedication, sportsmanship and representation of Brentwood College School.

We had a very enjoyable year, although it was frustrating at times. Highlighted by the play of many of our junior and novice players we stunned some of our opposition. Although the drills and preparations done by Grandpa Biondo helped, it was the experience gained through watchplay that improved our tennis. We were able to put two very close 5-6 losses to Shawnigan behind us, with a 9-2 thrashing against Parksville in league play. We then carried that momentum to beat Shawnigan in an island preparatory watch 7-4. A week later we hosted the Island AAA Championship. A triumph against Mt. Doug set the stage for the tournament, support from our peers was very much appreciated, and a special thanks to Team Tempest for their constant moral support on and off the court. A disappointing 4-7 loss to Oak Bay in the semis put us in the 3rd place match just out of reach of the provincial championships. We vented our frustration by ending our season with a 7-4 win against Claremont to clinch third on the Island.

Brentwood tennis looks good in the future. The first and second placing of the junior boys and girls respectively at the ISA's shows that the Brentwood tennis tradition will continue as we pass the torch on. The junior boys team of Marek Rokosh (single), Edwin Li, Matt Baker, Matt Mann and Charlie Bendall was particularly impressive.

The seven graduating students would like to thank Grandpa Biondo and Mr. Maclean for their dedication to tennis at Brentwood. We wish them luck with the future teams. To those members staying here, good luck next year.

During the season of 1997, Brentwood's first XI team played a talented, disciplined, sportsmanlike brand of soccer. Two highly respected and experienced coaches, two skilled and motivating captains, a group of uniform and strong willed players, and a bag of "Lysol-clean" jerseys (thanks Pete), were the recipe for an outstanding senior soccer team.

Peter Sloan and Kevin Fuller lead our team to a quick start. Insightful words, encouraging pats on the back and strategy bound our team together. Winning our first few games, we faced our long time rivals, Gulf Islands. A wild storm crashed upon our tiny yellow school bus as we arrived with three minutes left in our 45 minute warm up. Unfortunately, we lost that match 3-0 though our spirit remained strong. This example of sportsmanship and positive attitude proved to me what the game of soccer is about.

We would eventually forget that game and move on to the only "AAA" team in our league, Cowichan. Though fighting hard on a foreign field, one sad goal was given up and Andy Wray, the heart of our defense, sprained his ankle. Despite this bad luck, late in the second half we found our second wind. Dustin Hooper fought until he couldn't stand, this seemed to spark the team. Finally, a high shot floated over top of their keeper deep into the net making it a 1-1 tie. This moment of glory was not over for Christian Ledesma. In the final two minutes, a loose ball rolling on the six yard box set up Christian's opportunity. He sprinted at the open ball driving it right by the keeper leaving him without a chance. We won the game 2-1!

Continuing our winning streak, we won our next seven games with outstanding goal keeping by Rich Grimes and Jared Barber! Though we beat Cowichan for the second time, we still placed second in our league, giving us one more chance to make the Provincial Championships in a tournament for the last spot. Once winning this tournament (on shootouts!!) we proceeded on to the Island Tournament. Unfortunately, after a strong effort, we did not get the results that we needed to move on to the Provincials.

Although our team did not end up going to the Provincials, we should be proud of our performance. Not one player on this team lacked heart or sportsmanship. From Dustin Hooper's bead necklaces to our amazingly powerful 1st XI cheer, we were one of a kind. I want our team to remember not that we did not qualify for the Provincials, but that we had the spirit and talent of none other.

JUNIOR GIRLS SOCCER

This year's Junior Girls' Soccer Team was a large group of 19 enthusiastic players, each one eager to get on the field and willing to play in any position. We had a young squad with only two grade tens and an equal number of eights and nines, so the future looks very bright indeed. A special thanks to Joanne, Danielle and Robyn for stepping into the unenviable position of goalkeeper, and to Charlotte for being rock solid at the back. Tara and Louise were top scorers during the regular season with two each and they created numerous scoring opportunities week after week. Our season had a disappointing end as the Mid-Island playoff game was decided by penalties after regulation time ended in a 2/2 draw. Indeed, the season ended far too soon as the girls were just hitting their stride.

SENIOR GIRLS SOCCER

The senior girls enjoyed a game packed season this term. They were a strong, enthusiastic group who played with determination and were always competitive.

Wins against Qualicum, Ballenas and Lake Cowichan in the League, (which included a number of strong AAA teams) gave them a chance of qualifying for the North Island AA tournament! In a play off game against Woodlands, a school we lost to in our opening game, our passing game came together and we scored three excellent goals.

The road trip to sunny Campbell River was a highlight of the season and the girls enjoyed the opportunity to play some high level soccer in a fun filled couple of days. Ester kept us amused in the opening game against Gulf Islands, the eventual winners, and although we lost the game we played much better than in our league game. The game against Brooks school was a fiercely fought contest and we had several chances to score but unfortunately could not quite put them away. Amber and Rhiannon both played outstanding games in defense, despite having a French exam, a three hour drive and a large quantity of junk food before the game. Lauren Brown scored an excellent consolation goal and the whole team is to be congratulated on playing with great spirit and a lot of skill.

My thanks to all the girls for their efforts and to captain Amber Dobrezensky particularly for her leadership. Special mention must be made to Annie Mullins for her courageous goalkeeping and vice captain Joelle Plomb for her tireless work in midfield. Mr. Atterbury and I have enjoyed working with this very positive group of hard-working athletes. We thank you for a great season!

This year's version of the grade 8/9 soccer group was talented and a great deal of fun to coach. There were great differences in skills and experience but they learned to work well together. Soccer is a game in which size and age are less important than skill, so the grade eights were able to make a large contribution to both teams.

Everyone trained together, doing the same ball drills and the same amount of running. The small-sided games were played at a good tempo and they were hard-fought affairs. The older and stronger players such as Noel Day, Connor McKenna and Nick Gatzionis set good examples in practice and did much to encourage their less able peers to improve their skills and fitness.

The first game against the grade 10 team ended in a 1-1 tie, but it was a game that we controlled through superior skill and cohesion. When playing West Point Grey Academy, Noel Day, Charlie Ambrose and Derek Gosling controlled the mid-field area, allowing Pablo Sanchez the freedom to pick the defense apart for a 5-0 win. We then had to play St. George's on tired legs. We held a small advantage for most of the game, then closed the door with a spectacular final goal. A long chipped free-kick by Nick to Pablo, who lobbed the ball over the goalie for a stylish and cheeky finish. This was typical of the flair and imagination that Pablo brought to our team.

The second team, with the help of a few recruits, also played well, showing lots of energy and enthusiasm. It was a pity that there were not more ISA schools committed to playing soccer in the Winter term. Soccer remains a very popular game with both girls and boys at Brentwood and at the most junior level this season, the game was played well and with a lot of success.

7 wins 4 losses

The under-sixteen boys soccer team had a successful, winning season. The combination of new talent and experienced skill enabled the team to achieve a high level of performance. Convincing wins against Shawnigan and Duncan Christian helped to instill team confidence. As the season progressed, the team faced stiffer competition and met this challenge admirably. A close loss in an exciting game against Kelsey(4-2) was disappointing to the players, but it proved that the team could compete with the other skillful teams in the league.

Some of the highlights of the season were Cailen McKenna's hat tricks against Duncan Christian and Shawnigan, Mark Sloan and Noel Day's tenacious midfield play against Kelsey, Dean Braithwaite's Brazilian-like goal against Quamichan, and Kevin Garvey's timely tackling in every game. It was, however, a total team effort that enabled this team to achieve success.

Each player contributed to the good of the team and I was particularly proud of the boys' achievement of the "Most Sportsmanlike Team" award during the Mid-Island Championships held at Brentwood. I applaud the players for their hard work and commitment over the season and I encourage them to continue to enjoy and participate in this passionate sport.

TRIATHLON

The second term hailed the reemergence of the sport of triathlon at Brentwood. Although we were still some months away from the beginning of the spring racing season, the participants demonstrated an outstanding commitment to improving their strength and endurance. As a result, every athlete displayed a marked increase in his or her level of fitness. The term culminated in our trip to the UBC Triathlon during spring break. Although this was the first race for several of our athletes, we achieved outstanding results in both the junior and the elite categories, and all participants are to be congratulated for their hard work and dedication throughout the course of the term.

Back to front: Coach C. Elford, M. Moore, C. Brodie, J. Webster, R. Wong, S. Mahoney, L. Mackenzie, M. Boyar, T. West, R. Grimes, C. Godfrey, C. Lavdovsky, P. Juzwishin

The third term of triathlon was very rewarding, as the athletes were able to realize the benefits of all their hard work. We had a busy schedule throughout the spring, travelling to the UBC Triathlon in March, the North Shore Spring Triathlon and the Triathlon for Healing in May, and finishing our competitive season at the Panorama Classic Triathlon in June. In addition, we had to structure our rigorous training schedule in order to meet our competitive goals. It is with a great deal of pride that I report that the students involved in the triathlon program met the challenges of this term with an outstanding degree of success. Rex Wong, Chris Brodie, Meaghan Moore, Lindsay Mackenzie and Sarah Mahoney, all relative newcomers to the sport, deserve congratulations not only for the superior level of commitment they displayed but also for the impressive results they achieved in their races. I would also like to offer my sincere appreciation to two of the veterans of the triathlon program for the leadership, dedication and maturity that they demonstrated; both Megan Boyar and Chris Godfrey displayed excellent attitudes throughout the term and consistently placed in the top three of their age categories, which were often fiercely competitive. I feel honored to have had the opportunity to work with such a remarkable group of young people and I wish them every success for their future endeavors in the sport.

CROSS COUNTRY GROUP '98

From Top Left: T. Pennells, R. Yao, B. Seaman, C. Ravenhill, A. Bradley, J. Blaskovich, J. Hennessy, B. Code, E. Wheeler, J. Donnelly, L. Ferreira, D. Black, I. Chung, D. McFadyen, D. Spankie, Mr. Wynne (coach), W. Duguid, A. Ha, C. Lerch, D. Hall, L. Kingsbury, K. Burkmar, N. Gosling, K. Mills, T. Holmes, G. Mills, N. Braun.

Though we offered three distinct endurance sports this term the cross-country group with thirty eight athletes was the largest ever. The harsh weather rugged terrain and winter illnesses caused several to drop out and choose other sports. Only a handful completed the two hundred miles. We ran the many forest trails around Victoria, the ocean beaches, the lake trails and an occasional excursion on the roads. We ran in hail, sleet, rain and snow and sometimes we ran into darkness. It was not unusual to lose people along the way as Mike Robson, Rico Yao and Tom Pennells can testify. The girls in the group had a better sense of direction and always managed to find their way to the destination.

Among the swiftest runners this year were William Duguid, Ginny Mills, Neil Morriss, Chuck Ravenhill and Lydia Kingsbury. Those who showed the greatest improvement were Mike Robson, Darryl Black, Kate Burkmar and David Hall. Jonathan Blaskovich may be the tallest boy ever to enroll in this sport. Tara Holmes and Katie Mills would win the longevity award and Nicole Braun the award for dogged determination. Alex Bradley kept us all amused on the long bus rides and Ed Wheeler surely deserves a prize for the greatest variety of excuses to be off games.

A very pleasant bunch of people with whom to share the trails dispelling forever the myth of the loneliness of the long distance runner. My thanks to Angie Neilson, our Australian visiting teacher, Don McFadyan, our Scottish GAP student and a severely herniated Mr. Martin who used hospitalization as the feeble excuse for giving up at mid-term.

MOUNTAIN BIKING

Fireroad climbing. Well, there's more to it than that, but the fact that I'm a better climber than Matt seemed the central lesson in second term. In early January, with a tweaked out team of riders close behind, Mr. Purdon went off in search of a new trail to challenge us. This trail would have beautiful smooth corners as it wound down the mountain. It would be both fun and challenging, our bikes would drift around steep corners and launch off of huge rollers. All he could find was Hatchet Jacks. Ah yes, da loop, a long, slow climb in the rain followed by a very short fast downhill, in the rain. Mr. Purdon led us up snowy January roads and down muddy February singletrack. We hurt ourselves in Burnt Bridge, Tzouhalem and Millstream. Every day we would pray for summer and curse our bikes, but each ride ended with us muddy, bleeding, hypothermic, wet and smiling. I would ask for nothing more.

To understand the spirit of the Brentwood race team, you must first understand Ben's bike. Think of your mother's bike. Hit it with a small truck. Zip tie the pieces together and paint BRC across the downtube. Most would walk home, but Ben threw this two-wheeled wonder through the laser seven tenths of a second behind the winner at the Hammerfest downhill. This term saw our small team compete for the first time in Shawnigan Lake, Penticton, Parksville and Gibsons. We had top ten finishes in every race as well as Ben and Sam's podium finishes in downhill. Mr. Purdon topped us all with a fourth in the Hammerfest cross country. On behalf of all those who were ever in mountain biking at the school, I would like to thank Frank Purdon for creating the sport, and for riding and racing with us all over the years. His spirit will continue as we race the end of the season in September. Best of luck in whatever he does next. Our assistant coach, George Scott, will return next year to take over for Mr. Purdon. I look forward to more great riding as we dive into the 1998 season.

GOLF

~ Jory's story ~

Once in a blue moon, a superior athlete comes along in a sport and not only makes the sport look extremely easy, but makes the rest of us realize how awkward we make it look. Jory Russell returned to Brentwood this year and showed an extraordinary dedication to his chosen sport. Practising golf at least 6 days a week, he set an example of how an individual can drive himself to excellence.

His fluid swing is a joy to watch - compact, balanced, and rhythmic. Yet what separates Jory from the pack is his mental toughness. He does get emotional on the course, but he directs this energy into focussing on the next shot. Any (rare) bad shot is always followed by a good one. This self-belief, control and determination elevate him beyond the vast majority of golfers. His outstanding performances in the top junior competitions in B.C. give evidence of the very high level of golf that he has reached, certainly more than any previous Brentwood student. His present handicap (1) is much lower than any previous Brentonian. Jory was recruited by and visited some U.S. universities before settling on the University of New Orleans (NCAA Div. 1) and a substantial scholarship offer. We will follow his career with interest.

Unfortunately, the better golfers in the school were not available to us in the high school team competitions. So, with Jory scoring in the low 70s, and others in the mid and high 80s, our team scores were unimpressive in the North Island tournament (Crowne Isle, 2 shots from qualifying for next level) and the ISA tournament (3rd at Cowichan).

One player not available was Moritz Kugler, himself a 5 handicap player. With a booming drive, he challenged Jory in the Rob Soukop Memorial Tournament - the school championship over 36 holes. Jory shot a record low score of 73-74=147, whereas Moritz's score (76-80) would have won him most of the previous 25 championships. He just had the bad luck of running into Jory, although the competition was good for both boys.

There was some talent among the grade 10s - Graeme Baker, David Bellringer, Brad Briske, Kevin Garvey, Patrick Hole - and the odd flash of flair from others, but for most of the group the struggle was to keep the ball in play and the scores down. Most did improve over the term of golf, and with the marvelous warm weather it was always pleasant exercise. We did use a variety of players in our weekly league matches against the local schools, so most boys played in some competition or other. We won every league match and also the final tournament at Cowichan (team scores 74-80-80-82).

Nevertheless, if we are to move to the next level and compete provincially, then we must have many more players willing to adopt Jory's work ethic towards improvement. Most of the players have glaring faults in their set-up or swing, but refuse to put in the time and effort to correct them. It was significant that after each day's play, Jory and Moritz were often the only boys practising on the practice green while waiting for the bus. It was no surprise to see them shine so often.

I hope that Jory's example will have an impact upon the younger players and will stimulate in them that burning desire to improve. The shoes may be hard to fill, but at least we can dream....

If there is something that time teaches, it is maturity through gained experience. Each student in Sea Rescue grew up a great deal this year. We had some that went from bumbling gigglers to serious, thoughtful "personalities". We began with a new set of students and from this group have emerged some bright new stars.

During the first and second terms we earned our radio license, First Aid, CPR basic and Basic SAR (Search and Rescue) certificates. When the Mitchells left for an expedition in February, we kept each other awake (via Eric's video camera - the ultimate evidence) and interested through some fairly detailed student projects, which resulted in the longest "Quiz" any student has ever had to face - 200 questions! Group outings to Reid Island, Trial Island (though the wave god wasn't his usual brisk self) and Bamfield were outstanding successes. These trips not only bonded the group together, but created a sense of self-worth and trust for each other, which was to be tested during Regatta weekend, and finally at Portland Island for the final exam.

I know I have learned a lot more than what the moon has to do with the tides and how to anchor this year. I've learned that the Sea Rescue program is worth a great deal more than many people believe. It has given each member a respect for powerful machinery, the value of teamwork, and most importantly, the value of a human life. As a few of us learned through real emergency situations, in times of trauma, we all balance off each other - full gas tank or not - and I thank each member for becoming fully trustworthy by the end of the year. Finally, thank you to the Mitchells and Mrs. Pennells for your full support, given at all times, but especially when needed. It has been wonderful to work with you. Remember, besides the Dog's Philosophy of Life, Sea Rescue is about responsibility mixed with fun. Huge Waves, Tight Donuts, Swampy Shells, Big Ferries and Best Wishes to you all!

SAILING

Matt Foulger in the lead!

This year the BCS sailors experienced fantastic sailing conditions from a steady 5 knot breeze with lots of sun right up to 20 knots with 4 foot waves for planning and surfing. First term we had several veterans return from last year. These sailors competed in the Fall Youth Racing circuit and the Gladwell team racing Regatta. Many members of the team were beginners, enjoying the perfect weather in which to master the basics.

Second term is always a challenge as there is no way of avoiding those rainy, foggy, no wind days. The team made the best of it and used these days to work on their sailing theory and fitness levels. Many sailors completed their Canadian Yachting Association White Sail Levels I-III. This level of certification is recognized in most areas of the world. The team developed a strenuous body core circuit to train those all-important stomach and back muscles for competition. And of course, we toughed it out through many days of excellent yet cold sailing. Rushing to derig our boats once in because it was hard to feel our hands and feet!

The BCS Sailing Program continued to develop and expand the Competitive Team during third term. The Brentwood College Sailing Regatta was a huge success and was the season opener in the Island Youth Circuit. At the CFSA Regatta we had a record of 10 sailors qualify for the BC Summer Games, our captain Stephen Livingstone leading the way placing third at the event. We had to survive strong winds and large waves at the Spring Champs in Victoria. For the first time BCS competed at the BC Championship Regatta. This event was in Vancouver June 6-7-8. Stephen L, Steven B, Frank G, Matt F, James D, and Dan O had to be prepared for top level competition as many national level sailors attended the event.

We celebrated the end of a successful season with a half-day adventure on a Tall Ship. The Blarney Pilgrim, a Topsail Schooner, picked us up from the waterfront and whisked us off to a great day of 17th century style sailing. We had opportunities to raise sails, heave lines, make sheets fast to belaying pins, and even take over the helm. The daring climbed the rigging and ventured high up the foremast or mainmast. Some sailors climbed out on the bowsprit and lay suspended over the water. We were fortunate to have a following breeze and set the square sails. A great experience for everyone.

We would like to thank all the sailors for their efforts over the season. A special congratulation for all sailors who worked so hard training and preparing for regattas. Their success has put BCS back on the map in sailing competition.

Chrissy Lavdovsky

This year began a new experiment within our club. We recruited our athletes in the fall by grade and all the rowers were kept in large groups for the first term, rather than subdividing them into novices, lightweights and heavyweights. The result was that the experienced light athletes helped to teach the novice heavyweights and the few experienced heavyweight scullers helped teach many newcomers to scull. In the barge we had 16 rowers learning at a time, girls with girls, boys with boys and sometimes girls with boys. All the coaches worked together, focussing on the same aspects of technique and creating a very happy atmosphere for the athletes to develop and interact. We were indebted to all the rowers for their early commitment, as it laid the foundation for the competitive groups that developed later.

On another front, we began making our own single sculls in the boathouse, using the expertise of our boatman, Steve Titus. We finished two boats this year and have plans to make two more next year, as well as manufacture our own seats, riggers and other spare parts. This is a wonderful new direction for the club and I hope it leads to a whole new generation of competent single scullers.

As always we put on two major events in the year; a head style race in the second term and the ever-growing Brentwood Regatta in the third term. We had the assistance of Debbie Sage as our new manager/ coordinator. Thanks to her and the cooperation of the entire school, both events went off like clockwork and were a real credit to the school and the club.

The final event of the year was the trip to St. Catherine's for the Canadian Scholastic Championships. Six coaches and forty-two athletes represented our school and it was a very proud moment for me as head coach to watch the performance and behaviour of our young men and women, sometimes under extreme stress. In all events on the water and off they were a credit to their institution. Many parents attended the event, supported us loudly and were a source of strength and encouragement throughout. We were very grateful for this parental support, both from those that attended and those that phoned in almost every day from home. Of the twelve crews that were entered, all twelve were finalists, giving us 7 medals and 5 fourth place finishes. We were all incredibly proud of all the rowers for these impressive results.

I was lucky to have a first-class coaching staff to work in the club this year:

Ms. Nicole Peters and Mrs. Debbie Sage - Junior Girls crew

Ms. Susanne Walker - Senior and Junior Girls crews

Mr. Allan Wood and Mr. Richard Curry - Grade 8 and 9 Boys crews

Mr. Brian Carr - Colt Boys crew

Mrs. Pat Kelly - Boys Junior Varsity crew

I am sure you will find the following crew reports very interesting and will agree with me that this wonderful season was mostly due to their commitment and dedication to the sport.

The senior group from which the first eight was eventually selected started September with about 16 people. There were many novices that were eager, and several second year oarsmen who aspired to gain a place on the team. Training was not too intense but sufficient to win many of the fall races in fine style even though the boat was carrying many novices who could now believe in themselves as contenders for a top class Brentwood eight.

In the second term, we emphasized training and focussed on the ergometer as the major vehicle for enhancing endurance. During the Monster Erg contest held at the University of Victoria, we placed three people in the top four of the junior men category.

A training camp was held during spring break and by this time we had made the decision to compete at the National Scholastic Championships in St. Catharines, Ontario. At this camp we began to separate the athletes who would make the top level this year from those who would race in the JV and compete in the Junior events at the Nationals. We missed Scott Frandsen from the line up, and Rob Whitehead took his place until he returned to full health.

The racing season properly began with the "Dueling Over A Grand" regatta in Victoria, where we met our most feared competition-Vancouver College. We won this first contest giving us a confidence booster just before our own Brentwood Regatta. The crews must do a lot of their own work to prepare for their races due to the coaches being busy and organizing the Brentwood Regatta. We won the double scull, pair, quad scull and varsity eight while competing strongly in the varsity single, novice single and the coxed four. This win in the eight qualified our crew to race at the Opening Day Regatta in Seattle where the best junior crews from California, Oregon, Washington, and BC would race. The crew from Oakland California had already won the prestigious San Diego Crew Classic, and who would also win Opening Day, putting us in second place on the West Coast.

At the Provincial Championships, we enjoyed great success on the first day winning the pair, coxed four, novice single, double scull and JV single. On Sunday, we met our first defeat in the eight by Vancouver College although the margin was very close. Our unbeaten quad also went down to St. Georges to give us even more room for improvement as we entered the final phase of preparation for the nationals.

The first eight squad entered five events in St. Catharines. On the first day upon arrival, we had two very encouraging practice sessions on the Henley course. In many of the events, there would be heats followed by semifinals and finals. This usually meant that the entries in that event were between thirty and fifty crews. The standard performance generally has risen in the last four years and there were no easy or guaranteed journeys into the finals. We all fought hard to place in the finals but in each event we tried to save a little energy for Sunday. The major highlight was the semifinal race for the first eight in the Senior Heavy Eight division. We raced against two extremely strong crews in our race and only two would progress on to the medal round the next day. We were led by St. Mary's, a crew from Michigan, who won the Stotesbury Cup a few weeks previously. But with 500 metres to go, we pushed really hard and finished ahead of them at the line, posting the fastest time for all three heats in that event.

Sunday was dawned with reports of tomoado watch and thunderstorms all over southern Ontario. We had experienced rotten weather, delays, and postponements during the previous two days but now the conditions worsened. All Brentwood crews had qualified for the finals. In the early part of the day, the storm reached its worse point and the racing was abandoned. We huddled in our van to wait for the change in weather. We earned silver medals in the double and quad and placed fourth in the coxed four and lightweight single. We waited a further two hours to race the eight rather than the four hours shown on the original programme. We brought tired legs to the final race but were determined to give it everything to bring home the gold. The crew raced like men possessed, and again was reeling in the St. Mary's crew who were fresh, but this time our surge failed us and we settled for the bronze medal. To a man they showed their sportsmanship when they went to the dock and shook the hands of the victors.

I was very proud of this crew, their accomplishments, and the fine leadership shown by Sean Wall who was stroke of the boat and captain of rowing. I hope we will meet again in ten years time for a reunion row at the Brentwood Regatta.

VARSITY GIRLS ROWING

The women's crew had a tremendously successful and fun season. We visited many different regattas including; Delta Deas, Shawnigan and our own Brentwood Regatta, with the grand finale in St. Catharines. There was significant improvement throughout the season, resulting in top-notch performances at St. Kitts. We had a feisty bunch of girls this year with tons of spirit and energy. From G.I. Jane slogans, "hot stuff", many "sexy things", and lots of rainbows, all our crew "dawgs" managed to row with style.

With every new day of training came the routine reminder from Senator Walker of the ever-approaching date of the St. Kitts departure, and the exact number of hours until our 8+ final on Sunday at 12:48. The build-up for this event was huge, you could call it obsessive, every second power ten in training was to 'pull it through the 500 at St. Kitts', but it was all worth it, our experience there was all we could have hoped for. Our adventures at sea in Mill Bay turned out to be merely light showers and small side swells in comparison to the wild monsoons, tsunamis, lightning, thunder and tornado warnings packed into our 3 days of racing at School Boys. We survived the weather chaos and all qualified for the finals. Our 8+ raced in the Jr. Heavy division and in a very tight final, just edged out the '97 champions., Harvagal, to win a silver medal. We were lucky to have the super talent of 2 of our grade 10's, Kate and Charlotte to pull us through in the bow, and we walked away very proud of our performance. Our awesome, often stressed out but always diehard Sr. Lightweights also had a spectacular final. After highly commendable dedication and discipline in fighting weight requirements, they made us all so proud, not only in their commitment but in their outstanding performance in the final. The girls, after leading the entire race, just slipped to a silver medal by a bow ball. Our Jr. Heavy coxed four also had an exciting final, winning the seventh ever School Boy medal for Brentwood women.

After every girl came home with a medal, it is obvious why this season was so successful. The incredible dedication of Ms. Walker and Mrs. Sage made our great year possible and run smoothly, you ladies are amazing, thank you. Much thanks is also due to Mr. Titus, Ms. Peters and Mr. Carr for all their greatly appreciated help.

The entire rowing team was very united this year. The interaction between all the crews created a fantastic team spirit and positive environment in which everyone was encouraged to excel; this undoubtedly was reflected in every crew making the finals at St. Kitts. Thanks again Ms. Walker for everything. An absolutely amazing year, thank you to every rower who contributed to the cheerful energy that made our experience so much fun. Thank you to all my girls for a fabulous year, I am going to miss you tons. To all you ladies still here next year, good luck - you have some huge potential. Oh yeah, since I couldn't... kick some Gorge butt for me alright? Whooo-ya! P.S. A little message from all the girls - You flyweights are goin' down! Girls Rule.

Keep training y'all...reunion '08 is not that far away!
Thanks so much ladies, I love you guys!
- Chrissy Lavdovsky, girls captain

From the Head Coach:

I would like to thank Mrs. Sage, Ms. Peters and our friend from down under, Ms. Neilson for their knowledge, their incredible support and their big hearts. We could not have done it without you. Thank you to Chrissy for providing a positive and energetic role model as this year's Women's Captain. On behalf of all the coaches and your fellow teammates we wish you all the best as you pursue the first of your many dreams this summer, of wearing national team colours at the Junior World Rowing Championships. I am incredibly proud of the entire crew and I look forward to working with the returning athletes next year. To all the graduates; Kim, Sarah, Stephanie, Andrea and Chrissy, I wish you continued success in your individual endeavors. Remember: moderation is the key! Back: J. Stewart, R. Weedon, C. Milne, W. Gorrisen, I. Gove, E. Zimmerman, A. Jackman, R. Whitehead, M. Persson, Mrs. Steinbrink-Kelly (coach) Front: S. Pierce, M. O'Malley

My first experience with Brentwood rowing was my visit to the school last year in early spring. I went out with Mr. Queen to observe a rowing practice. His crew seemed like a work of art. I looked upon their seemingly effortless, yet powerful motions, with the awe one looks upon a master painter describing the beauty of the world with paint. I looked forward to joining the program the following year, but I knew that I would never even be close to the majesty obtained by the crews that I saw that day.

At the start of this year I seemed to have been correct in my prediction of mediocrity. Then came the first glimmer of hope – the Elk Lake Regatta where a group of flyweight, novice and a few generally non athletic rowers (a.k.a. the JV boys) came .5 seconds behind a Shawnigan crew that had been rowing together for three years and though, as stroke seat would be quick to point out, it was not the complete crew, it was an amazing accomplishment.

From there we just seemed to go up. Yet it was not until the Brentwood Regatta that we truly shone bright enough for people to start to take notice. Every race that our JV squad entered we won - from the eight to the JV quad. We became one of the most successful (and best looking, according to the other girls crews) crew at the regatta. For the first time the term "Spice Boys" (a phrase used generally as an insult to most of the JV squad) became a term we were all proud of.

The BC provincials became simply a reaffirmation of what we felt we were, which was a champion crew as both our JV boats crossed the line with hundreds of yards of open water and a stroke rate of 25. Our crew was closer than ever to what I saw on my visit which seemed so long ago.

The crossing of the finish line that Sunday on Shawnigan Lake closed one chapter of our JV rowing and began another which would involve a new group of rowers as well as a new objective. The new boat was made up of the best of the JV and colt squads. Our objective was the Canadian Schools Championships. Our training schedule, far more rigorous, involved two daily rows with one at 5:30 in the morning. Our drive, which held us together and let us succeed to this point, now became even stronger. We enjoyed what we were doing and if we won, that would be a bonus.

Before we realized it we were on the plane to St. Catharines. We each had a different image within our heads but they all had the one common picture - us succeeding at what we loved to do. But once we got there the greatest battle was not on the water but between our joy in the sport of rowing and the fickle nature of the skies. It seemed, the only constant in the weather was the over-powering humidity. On the first day of racing came battle#1; thunderstorms postponed the race which in turn made it necessary to run races more quickly than planned. After an uneventful eight race where we shut it down to a second place finish, things got sort of interesting. Our next race was our Brentwood Regatta Champion Junior Heavy four. We were all looking forward toward a good race but because timing was off on the start times, we missed our race. That was the realization of all my fears, and the worst moment of the regatta. Yet out of this hardship came our strongest attribute as a crew and that was our attitude. We spoke to the officials and after an arduous protest meeting they agreed to let us have a time trial. Given this second chance we weren't about to blow it so we set off to row our best and we did. I have never felt such unity with three other people as I did this race and as we crossed the finish line my mind pulled out of the boat and looked from afar and I saw what I had seen while sitting in the coach boat one year ago.

After the heats we had two blessedly unexciting semifinals where we placed first in both the eight and four. The next day our patience was tried again by a tornado warning and postponed races. Eventually the winds dropped and the boats flocked to the docks like sleek centipedes, all vying for positions on the slick half-submerged wharf. Once the races actually started things began to become normal again and a wonderful tailwind blasted us to two fourth-place finishes. As our boats were being loaded I realized that thanks to our wonderful coach Mrs. Kelly, her unending patience, and everyone else's unfailing support, we had proved that crew is not a sport of exceptional athletes but of exceptional teams. Thank you for everything Mrs. Kelly, we will all look forward to rowing for you next year. - Will Gorrisen

In reflecting on the past ten months, I have come to the conclusion that what the athletes did was exceptional. New coach, new format, new ideas. In September we set a high goal for the squad: win the team championship at the B.C. Championships at the beginning of May. The students trained very hard to improve their technique and base fitness, by challenging themselves against the senior club. Considering the size was in the novice program, the lightweights proved that speed does not always come with being big and lanky.

The enthusiasm during the winter to get stronger and fitter was inspiring and created a fantastic squad bond. During the regatta season, the "A's" narrowly lost to Vancouver College in the 8+ and 4+. Considering we had five lightweights in the boat, this was an incredible achievement.

The Novice Colt program was very successful, going undefeated in the 8+ and 4+. At the Brentwood Regatta, the Novices won a total of five races, the best result for a crew in the school.

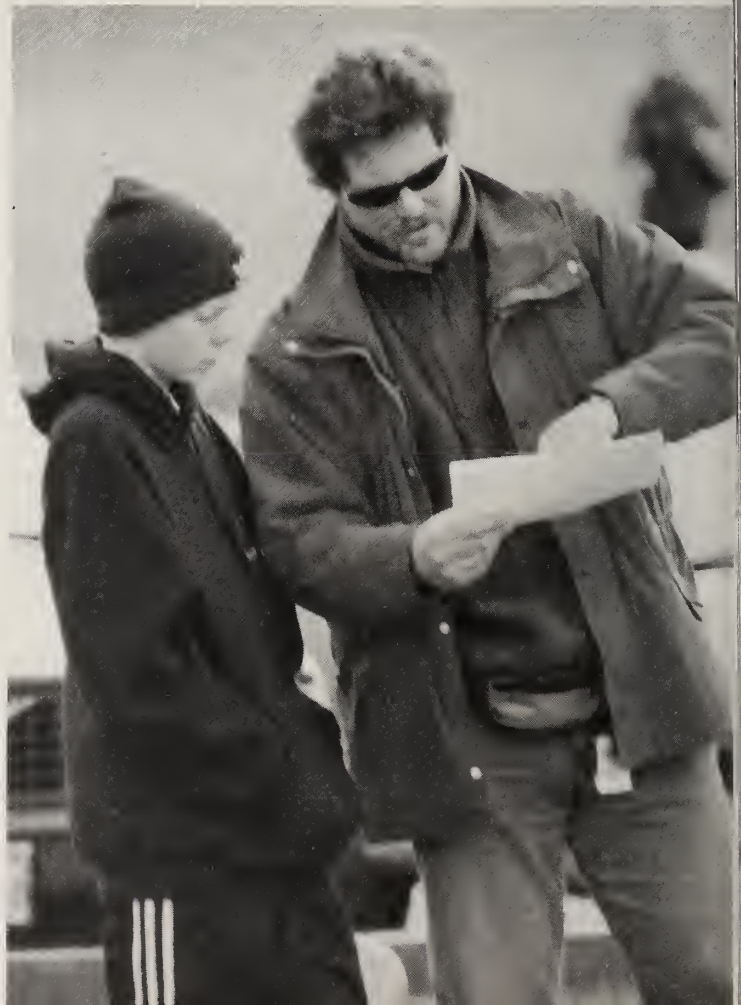

A testament to the squad's dedication this year was the naming of eight athletes to the Flyweight Eight and three athletes to the Junior Heavy Eight. The Flyweights came fourth in the 8+ and with a tremendous kick at the end, the Bronze medal.

I would like to thank each and every one of the twenty-one athletes that stuck with the program this year. To those few that didn't; you missed a great time.

JUNIOR BOYS ROWING

From the Coach...

We were grateful for the return of Peter, Derek, Drayton, Nick and Morgan from last year, but it was not long before we were stunned by the ease with which Mr. Brian Carr spotted and promoted Morgan to the Colt program in early September. Armed with the remaining four, and always watching over our shoulders for further abductions, we bravely headed for the tank and the barge with our 20 neophytes.

By November, and our first racing experiences, some of the students had mastered the noble skills of bringing oars and a boat down to the dock. Getting a group of eight students to bring a matched set of oars was more difficult, and took a further three months to master. Still, we insisted on them competing in a number of regattas throughout the year, and standards rose immeasurably.

Despite their lack of experience and size, this group of oarsmen had a wonderful season, and we are both very proud of their accomplishments. In the Junior B Eight event at Delta Deas, they capitalized on a collision between the two favoured crews and rowed away to win the event. Several crews qualified for finals at the prestigious Brentwood Regatta, as well as the BC Championships at Shawnigan, and the Junior C quad won their event.

This has been a fun group to work with, and I look forward to vicariously enjoying their continued success in the rowing program.

The Memories...

Crossing the finish line ahead of the Colts. The mighty barge! Watching little Dordevich moonwalk off the dock. Driving a coach boat into a cement wall. Charlie Dordevich flipping a single, first time out, as predicted. Frank qualifying for the Junior B single scull final in the BC championships. Winning the Junior C quad event at the BC Championships. Watching the Junior C quad win at the BC Championships. "Winning gold" at Delta Deas. Mr. Carr telling us to get off the water, because he feared for our lives. Winning gold over the Colts at Delta Deas. Throwing little Dordo into the water many times. Beaching an eight on the dock. Beating both the Brentwood and Vancouver College Colt crews at Delta Deas. Singing with Fernando "I can see clearly now..." Nearly coming third at the Brentwood Regatta, catching a crab, breaking a seat, and losing it all in the last 100m. Getting the third place ribbon at Shawnigan. Qualifying for the single scull finals at Brentwood and Shawnigan. Watching everyone else getting thrown into the water from a safe distance.

JUNIOR GIRLS ROWING

This year was a rebuilding year for the junior girl's rowing programme. Many of our veterans moved on up to the senior ranks leaving what Ms. Walker would call a "green" bunch of enthusiastic novices. Many of us wondered what the racing season would hold for us. All the running, stair climbing, push-ups, and sit-ups, leap frog, rope jumping, and yes, water training, resulted in an exceptional year. The Junior B 8+ went undefeated the entire season (November to May) in our new Hudson shell ~ the Yvonne Carr. We were proud to row in a shell honouring this exceptional lady. The Novice Girls, with their determination, competitiveness, and humor shone through. They exceeded many of our expectations. One racing highlight of so many was the two Brentwood junior crews placing 1st and 2nd at the Provincial Championships. On behalf of the 'few' experienced girls, we would like to thank the new younger members of our team for making the year so successful and keeping the junior team tradition alive. Last but not least, we would like to thank our three coaches: Ms. Walker, Mrs. Sage, and Ms. Peters for their time, coaching skills and their caring which created a year of rowing to be remembered.

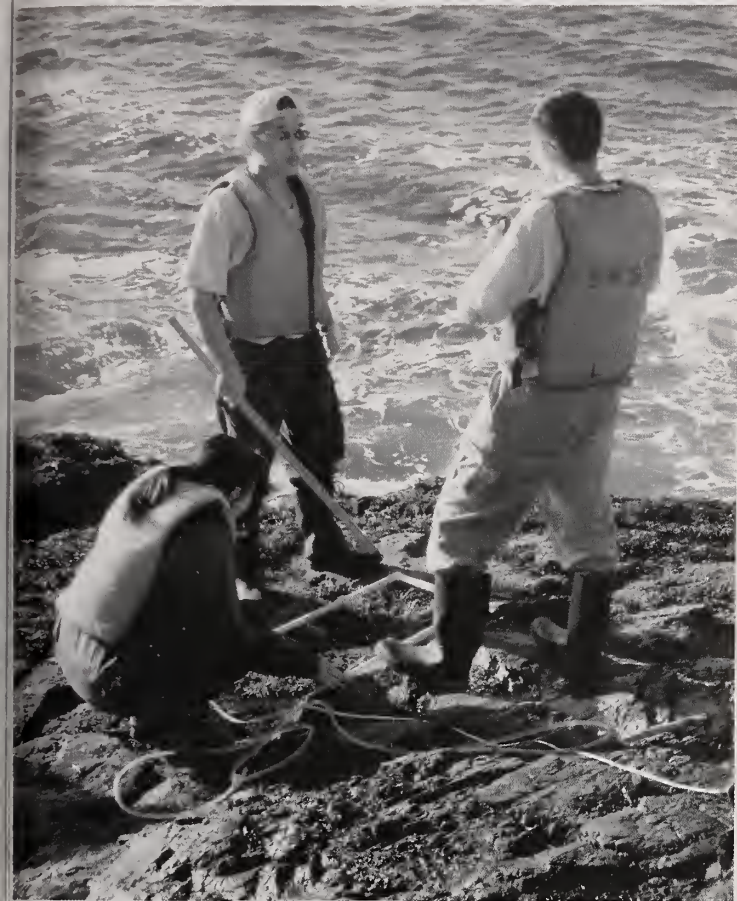

Love,
Kate Burmar and Charlotte Manning
